Hurricane Changes Course

Weathermen Expect Storm To Strike South Carolina

CHARLESTON, S. C., Aug. 30—(AP)—Hurricane Able, the first of the season, headed for the South Carolina coast tonight.

The Miami Weather Bureau's 8 p. m. (CST) advisory said the "small violent" hurricane will pass inland within the next few hours with the center between Charleston and Beaufort, about 70 miles southwest of here.

The latest advisory placed the hurricane center at 40 to 50 miles east of Savannah, Ga., still moving northward.

The hurricane has a small area of winds about 100 miles-an-hour near the center and hurricane force or above probably 75 miles in diameter.

Residents Ready

The coastal residents were ready for it.

As warnings were hoisted from North Georgia coast to Wilmington, N. C., residents and vacationers battened down every movable object in expectation of the big blow. Civil defense organizations and wings of the civil air patrol in Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina were alerted for duty. The South Carolina wing had 15 mobile units ready for the emergency.

Most early arrivals for the Labor Day week-end at beaches resorts refused to return home and prepared to weather the storm. Thousands of week-end tourists, warned of the approaching storm, stayed at home.

Homeowners along the several hundred miles of sandy beaches stretching northeastward from here moved possessions inland. The advisor warned of "dangerously high" tides tonight along the North Georgia and South Carolina coasts.

Military Men Stand-By

Big military installations along the coast at Paris Island, S. C., Camp Lejeune and Cherry Point, N. C., also took measures to safeguard life and property.

Historic Charleston suffered a hurricane in 1940 that cost property owners two million dollar's damages. Remembering 1940, city, military and naval officials began preparing for the storm yesterday.

Sedalia Misses Its Blood Quota

The Sedalia Red Cross blood unit missed its 300-pint quota by 22 at the last visit of the Bloodmobile last Wednesday and Thursday.

The Kansas City unit sets up a 150-pint daily minimum. Although this will not interrupt the local program, the deficit must be made up in the future visits if Sedalia is to make its yearly quota.

Last week's visit was the first of the next fiscal year; the local unit was one of four counties to make its quota during the period which ended June 30.

The local Red Cross chapter wishes to thank not only the regular donors, but those who gave blood without appointments. There were 42 volunteers Thursday and 23 Wednesday.

In addition to those who gave blood, there were many Sedalians, unable to donate, whose civic spirit is appreciated by the Red Cross. Those who helped in other ways were a woman who sent a cake to the nurses, and a filling station operator and a man's club who provided electric fans for the donating station.

Guards Return From Minnesota

After two weeks of field training and summer camp, members of the "C" Battery of the 128th and the 35th Headquarters Division from Sedalia returned home Saturday from Camp Ripley, Minn.

Both units attended the camp as a part of the 35th Division, which is comprised of National Guard units from Missouri and Kansas.

The units arrived in Sedalia about 8 a. m. Saturday with the exception of a rear detachment, which is expected to arrive sometime Monday morning.

Most of the officers with the units have also arrived, but some will return to Sedalia the first of the week.

The trip to and from Camp Ripley was made by bus.

Milo, Mo. Woman Dies In Wreck Near Nevada

NEVADA, Mo. (AP) — Mrs. Liza Robb of near Milo, Mo., was killed instantly in a truck-auto accident shortly before noon on U. S. Highway 71, 2½ miles north of Milo.

Her brother, S. B. McKethen, with whom she was riding, was injured. He is in a hospital here. The extent of his injuries was not known immediately.

The Highway Patrol said the McKethen car was struck from the rear by a trailer-transport driven by Richard Reschke, 17, Falls City, Neb. Reschke said the McKethen car slowed unexpectedly and he was unable to avoid the collision. The car was hurtled from the highway, across a ditch, through a fence, and it landed on its top in a field.

Reschke did not appear to be hurt. The front of the truck was damaged.

Chimpanzees Welcome Television Cameramen

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 30—(AP)—A New York television crew got an affectionate welcome today from the actors—the chimpanzees.

Pancho and Roy greeted the three-man crew by climbing all over the men, bestowing chimpanzee hugs, peering through view-finders on the cameras and inspecting other equipment.

The crew will make films of the animal's antics each day for use on a weekly nation-wide Dumont television show.

Death Toll Grows As US Opens Holiday

(By The Associated Press)

The accidental death toll mounted slowly Saturday as millions went on Labor Day week-end trips to celebrate summer's last holiday.

At least 100 deaths were reported in the period from 5 p.m. (CST) Friday to 8 p. m. (CST) Saturday. Traffic accidents accounted for 82.

There were four drownings and 14 fatalities due to miscellaneous mishaps.

The National Safety Council predicted that the death count from traffic accidents would reach 480 for the 79-hour period from 6 p. m. local time Friday to midnight Monday.

The council had estimated that 40 million automobiles would be in operation during the week-end. But a hurricane threat and widespread rain in the southeastern states probably reduced this number considerably.

Last year a survey showed that there were a record 658 deaths from all accidents during the Labor Day week-end, including the highest traffic toll ever recorded for the holiday—461. There were 97 drownings and 100 miscellaneous accident deaths recorded for the 1951 Labor Day week-end.

The deaths by states today, traffic, drowning, miscellaneous included Illinois 4-0-1, Kansas 2-0-0, and Missouri 3-0-0.

Cancer Battler To Talk Monday To Optimists

J. W. Ficklin, district chairman of the Cancer Crusade and prominent civic leader and businessman of Columbia, will be the speaker at the Optimist Club Tuesday at the Bothwell Hotel.

Ficklin has announced that there is being prepared for release Tuesday figures from the Division of Public Health regarding cancer deaths in Missouri by counties and the number of people being treated. Ficklin will talk on cancer at the meeting. His talk is a part of the American Cancer Society's educational program in an attempt to have every organization within the state push an annual program against the No. 2 killer of mankind, cancer.

The Rev. J. W. Watts, secretary of the Optimist Club and Pettis County campaign chairman of the American Cancer Society, arranged to have Mr. Ficklin as speaker.

Eisenhower Will Address GOP Women's Club In St. Louis

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 (AP)—The National Federation of Women's Republican Clubs announced tonight Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will address the group's biennial convention in St. Louis on Saturday, Sept. 20.

The announcement was made by Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington, president of the clubs.

Superforts Again Hit Pyongyang

Bombers Follow-Up Friday Night Raid; Five MIGs Downed

SEOUL, Sunday, Aug. 31—(AP)—B-29 Superforts roared over the battered North Korean capital of Pyongyang last night and dropped tons of high explosives on a 100-acre supply area in the southwest section of the city.

The raid came only hours after a series of jet battles deep in northwest Korea in which American, British and Canadian pilots shot down at least five Russian-built MIGs and damaged 11. One damaged Red warplane was listed as probably destroyed.

The attack by 11 Superforts last night was a follow-up to Friday's hammering raids when Allied fighter-bombers flew more than 1,400 sorties over the capital.

The target area contained about 750 single-story buildings used by the Communists to store military supplies.

No Communist warplanes challenged the big bombers and only moderate anti-aircraft fire was reported. Because of the heavy layers of clouds over the city, the B-29s used electronic aiming techniques to drop their bomb loads.

Were Civilians Warned?

An official spokesman for the Far East Air Forces in Tokyo said he did not think civilians in Pyongyang had been warned the raid was coming.

We feel they have been warned sufficiently," Brig. Gen. William P. Nuckols said. "They know how they are living in a danger area."

Pyongyang Radio returned to the air Sunday morning after two days of silence. It made no mention of the Superfort raid but admitted Friday's day - long attacks destroyed or damaged more than 500 buildings and caused 200 casualties.

The Red broadcast as usual said most of the casualties were children and old people and most of the damage was to farm crops around the city.

The Reds, apparently stung by Friday's raid on Pyongyang, sent 100 MIGs roaring out of their Manchurian sanctuary to do battle with U. N. Sabrejets yesterday.

The U. S. Fifth Air Force said 79 Sabre pilots fought 19 separate battles with the larger MIG forces over Northwest Korea.

Sabres Enjoy Good Month

The new score gave sharpshooting pilots of the swift Sabres one of their best months of the war. Their August tally with one day to go, stands at 32 MIGs destroyed, three probably destroyed and 43 damaged.

They shot down one MIG Friday and damaged two.

The Air Force said the Red jets shot down only one Sabre in August air battles prior to Saturday. Allied losses Saturday, if any, will be listed later in a weekly summary.

Some of the Sabres in Saturday's roaring battles were piloted by British and Canadian fliers. A British and a Canadian pilot each scored a damage claim.

Capt. Clifford Jolley of Salt Lake City, one of the two U. S. jet aces still in Korea, got one damage claim Saturday.

Moberly Girl Is Killed When Car Hits Bicycle

MOBERLY, Mo., Aug. 30 (AP) — Gloria Doris Shockey, 15, was killed by a motor car tonight as she rode her bicycle near her home at the south edge of town.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. George Henry Shockey.

Congress Uncovers Mistakes In Veterans Housing Program

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30—(AP)—A congressional committee today charged widespread irregularities, including bribery and favoritism, in administration of the huge veterans housing program.

The charge was made in a report by a House select committee which investigated educational training and loan guaranty programs under the GI Bill. The group is headed by Rep. Teague (D-Tex.)

The committee said irregularities turned up by the Veterans Administration's own inspection and investigation service included:

"Acceptance of gifts and gratuities on a widespread basis.

"Acceptance of bribes and participation in conspiracies by some loan guaranty officials.

"Purchase of homes by some loan guaranty officials under questionable circumstances.

"Favoritism to certain fee appraisers and fee compliance inspectors in some offices.

"Favoritism to certain builders by expediting handling of their cases, granting unjustified price increases, and authorizing deviations and substitutions favoring the builder.

"Interests in outside activity such as real estate sales, construction and lending companies, when such as real estate sales, construction and lending companies, when such activities tended to conflict with the interest of the government."

List Of Presents

The report said one appraiser at Detroit acknowledged that his Christmas presents from persons doing business with the loan guaranty division included five bottles of whisky, a basket of fruit, a chafing dish filled with fruits and nuts, a punch bowl filled with Christmas goodies, four turkeys, two hams, a carving set, a bottle of wine, a fruit cake, some linens, and gift certificates totaling $95.

The committee recommended that the loan guaranty officer of the regional VA office in Washington, D. C., be removed and the loan guaranty division be reorganized immediately.

The official was identified as Morgan B. Callahan by Oliver E. Meadows, the committee's staff director. Callahan could not be reached for comment today.

The committee made a number of recommendations. These included:

Giving the Veterans Administration legal authority to supervise the contractural relationship between the veteran purchaser and the seller.

Guarantees Run One Year

Allowing VA to require that sales contracts give a full year's guarantee on heating, plumbing and electrical fixtures, a dry basement, a sound roof, and a satisfactory spectic tank, if one is required.

Adequate civil service ratings and pay to attract competent professional employes to VA.

Furnishing each veteran borrower a booklet explaining the operation of the loan guaranty program and describing the responsibility of the veteran, the builder and the seller.

A specific prohibition against acceptance of gifts and gratuities by VA employes from persons doing business with VA; also limitations on their own outside business activities.

Death Stalked Bunker Hill, Only 4 Miles From Truce Site

By Sam Summerlin

EDITORS: This is the story of Bunker Hill, told by an Associated Press correspondent who was there when the fighting was at its worst.

SEOUL, Sunday, Aug. 31—(AP)—War and peace merge in weird and tragic fashion in the battle of Bunker Hill.

Generals and admirals toil in the armistice talks at Panmunjom, only four miles to the west of Bunker Hill.

U. S. Marines captured and kept Bunker Hill in a battle that some leatherneck veterans called as hot as any action they saw on Iwo Jima and Tarawa.

By day, the Marines fought in view of the silvery balloons that hover over Panmunjom to mark that tiny perimeter of peace.

By night, the camouflaged warriors watched a searchlight cast its nervous beam into the dark sky over the neutral zone.

Bunker Hill is a symbol of the brand of warfare that prevails today—and that likely will continue until the Panmunjom talks succeed or fail.

On the broad canvas of war, Bunker Hill cuts a small figure. The fighting was confined to one area and the Marines committed only one company—roughly 250 men—at a time in the fighting.

The enemy's casualties were nearly 4,000—less than half the killed and wounded suffered by the North Korean forces in the month-long "Heartbreak Ridge" campaign.

Battle Ranks With Worst

But for sheer ferocity, the battle of Bunker Hill ranks high with the Marines.

Lt. Col. Gerard T. Armitage of Evanston, Ill., commander of the battalion that did most of the Bunker fighting, said Marine veterans of Iwo Jima and Tarawa told him: "This is the hottest combat we've ever experienced."

The Leathernecks endured savage enemy artillery and mortar fire, 108 degree heat and torrential rains. When Chinese soldiers surged into Marine trenches, they fought with fists and knives.

The Allied defenders live less than 50 yards from the Chinese. A young, wounded infantryman told me: "We can hear those goonies jabbering in their bunkers."

Bunker Hill lies under the nose of commanding Chinese positions. As one Marine put it: "Every time you open your mouth, they can put a bullet in it."

The Allied defenders are entrenched on the southern slopes. The enemy has all trails leading off the hill zeroed in, so movement is only at night. One wounded soldier said he was hit at 8 o'clock in the morning but had to wait until nightfall before he could be taken off the hill.

Why is Bunker Hill important? Maj. Gen. John T. Selden, boss of the First Marine Division, explained: "On that hill, we can look right into their the Communists positions."

The Marines had to stop what they called the "creeping" Chinese offensive, said Lt. Col. Spencer H. Pratt of Cleveland Heights, Ohio. He works in the Marine Division's G-3 operations section that masterminds Marine maneuvers.

The Marines seized Bunker Hill in a bold, surprise maneuver the night of Aug. 11-12. The conquest was easy.

"But the Communist reaction to our move was strong and positive," said Pratt.

The Chinese made vicious and rare daylight assaults on Bunker Hill the afternoon of Aug. 12. For five days and nights, the Marines held their ground through seven nightmarish attacks.

On Aug. 16, the Chinese called it quits. But angry probes since that date show the enemy is still vitally interested in the battle-scarred terrain.

Armitage called the struggle "the most fanatical fighting I've ever seen." He said the Marines threw up a "solid wall of steel" with artillery and mortar shells, rifle and machine gun bullets, tank fire, rockets and hand grenades.

Chinese Kept Coming

"Usually," Armitage said, "you can fire the whole works like that for three to five minutes and stop any attack. But we fired four hours and 10 minute without stopping and the Chinese still kept coming."

The colonel said 200 to 300 Chinese bodies were sprawled in the dust after the first counterattack. "Some kids had to push bodies off their holes to get out."

Armitage said the Chinese artillery and mortar fire was furious. In one attack 10,000 to 15,000 rounds dropped in a spot 1,000 yards square.

Doctors stayed awake for 48-hour stretches and longer to tend the wounded. By the trainload, casualties were moved south to clear tent hospitals for more wounded brought from the combat zone by helicopter and ambulance.

Day and night, the Marines had to stay alert. The sun beat down and glared off the white sand. Armitage said "quite a few got dehydrated. Heat prostration hit them and they were out like a light."

One Marine remarked:

"You got so hot and tense you couldn't eat. I mostly lived on cocoa."

One Marine said he fired all night and never saw a single Chinese soldier. At dawn, he was amazed to find 15 bodies lying in front of his gun.

Bunker Hill was the first big battle test for the new Marine armored vests and every Leatherneck now swears by his protector. Many can recite stories of how they or their buddies were saved when the vest took the blow of a bullet or piece of shrapnel.

Today, the battle of Bunker Hill goes on, but quietly. It may flame anew.

"The Chinese are trying to find out our intentions," said a division officer. The answer is:

"We intend to stay."

Jet Ace Dies In Air Crash At Detroit

DETROIT, Aug. 30—(AP)—An Air Force F-89 Scorpion tore itself apart above 51,000 spectators and carried its pilot, a Korean jet ace, and his radar observer to their deaths at the International Aviation Exposition here today.

Four spectators were hurt, none seriously, although at first one was believed to have been killed. Five cars were wrecked or damaged by falling debris. Several spectators had narrow, almost miraculous escapes.

Killed were Maj. Donald Adams, 31, of Mt. Clemens, Mich., the pilot, and Capt. Ed Kelly, 34, of New York City, the radar observer in the all-weather jet fighter.

Adams, father of three, returned home only June 16 from Korea where he bagged 6½ Communist MIGs and became the nation's 13th jet fighter ace. Both he and Kelly were members of the 61st Fighter Squadron stationed at Griffis Air Force Base, Rome, N. Y.

Wing Flies Off Plane

As Adams and Kelly came screaming over the field at 200 feet with another F-89 for a demonstration of high-speed climbing, a wing flew off their plane. It spun crazily upward. The plane's tail flew off and the remainder, carrying the doomed men, splattered into an ammunition storage shed and exploded.

Exploding small-arms bullets from the storage supply of the Michigan National Guard endangered spectators who flocked to the scene.

The second Scorpion, carrying Maj. John Recher, 31, of Miamisburg, O., and Capt. Thomas Myslicki, 29, of Minneapolis, landed safely and undamaged.

Among the awe-struck spectators who saw the spectacular accident were Air Force Secretary Finletter and Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff. Both rushed to the crash scene, ignoring the exploding bullets as they attempted to aid in futile rescue attempt.

Vandenberg said the accident probably was caused by the force of updrafts and downdrafts encountered in pulling up in a sharp climb with afterburners adding scores of horsepower to the plane's jet power plant.

Afterburners convert exhaust gases into additional energy and are used to add speed and climb.

He added: "This is one of the strongest airplane ever built, but there are some things you just can't build against."

Some Say Adlai, Ike Re-Enact Old Fable

Soldiers Hear Peace Outlook By Stevenson

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 30—Gov. Adlai Stevenson has told America's armed forces, in a message broadcast overseas, that he does not believe a third World War is inevitable, "but neither is peace inevitable."

The text of his statement was released in Springfield today.

An aide said the Department of Defense requested Stevenson, the presidency, and his Republican opponent, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, to prepare a message for the men and women in service overseas.

The armed forces radio began broadcasting the transcribed statements during the week, the aide said.

Stevenson, describing himself as an optimist, said: "I want to make one thing very definite: I don't expect a third World War and I reject the notion that a third World War is inevitable.

"And if war is not inevitable, neither is peace inevitable."

He Rips GOP Bloc

He condemned one bloc of Republicans for what he called the "little America" concept, the theory of the United States confining its policies and actions to its immediate area.

And, turning to the domestic scene, he told the fighting forces:

"So long as you are asked to do the unusual, so long must we put aside politics as usual, profits as usual, strikes as usual, and pleasure as usual."

That, he said is the basic message he plans to carry into the presidential election campaign. He said he was not sure it is good politics: "I don't know yet whether one can win an election with hard distasteful truths, but this is the only way I want to win it."

The governor struck out sharply at people who ask whether time is working for or against the United States.

"It seems to me a silly question," he said. "Time works for the fellow who makes best use of his time. America can make better use of time than our adversaries."

To the persons who claim the United States has gained nothing in the last year of the Korean War, Stevenson said: "I sometimes wonder how short-sighted some people can get, especially in a campaign year. We have gained a year's time and we have used that year to accomplish three significant victories."

List Of Victories

The three victories, he said were:

1. "We have enormously expanded our defense production. I will not say we have yet won the battle of production, but we are well on our way to winning it." That progress, he said, has upset the Kremlin's calculations.

2. The strength of America's allies has grown in South Korea, Indochina, and Western and Southern Europe. "There are no more easy pickings in the Far East or in Europe and the Kremlin likes to gamble only on sure things."

3. "We have done what many doubters of Democracy though a Democracy could not do. We have yielded neither to the hotheads who wanted to extend the war nor the weak-kneed who wanted to quit when the going got tough."

The Weather

Missouri — Considerable cloudiness Sunday and Sunday night with scattered showers; partly cloudy Monday; turning cooler northwest Sunday, cooler north and west central Sunday night and Monday; highs Sunday 75-80 extreme northwest to 80s elsewhere.

"BUMPY" IS ALL SHE HAS LEFT — Eight-year-old Betty Worthington whose cocker spaniel, "Paddy," was run over and killed at Freehold, N. J., by a speeding car in Gov. Adlai Stevenson's motorcade, clutches "Bumpy," another cocker and the only pet she has left. The Democratic presidential nominee was enroute to a political rally in Neptune, N. J., when the dog was killed. He said he was "exceedingly concerned" about the accident and hoped to make amends. (AP Wirephoto).

Ike Offers Labor Unions A Square Deal

NEW YORK, Aug. 30—(AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower offered to America's workers today a Labor Day pledge of fairness, friendship and no coercion.

But even as the Republican presidential nominee was making overtures to labor, he became snarled in something of a dispute with a trio of New Jersey CIO leaders.

They said the general had told them he never had heard of "union security" and didn't know the difference between the open, union and closed shop.

"Not so," an Eisenhower aide came back.

Joel R. Jacobson and Hugh Caldwell of the Essex-West Hudson CIO Council and Fred Ascough, United Auto Workers international representative, said in a statement in Newark that when they had called on Eisenhower in New York Thursday they found he "didn't know the answer to a simple question which any students of high school economics could answer."

Newlin Explains

The Eisenhower aide, Stewart Newlin, said he sat in on the general's meeting with the CIO trio and other New Jersey labor leaders-and Eisenhower had stipulated that there could be only a general discussion of labor-management relations because his time was limited.

So, he said, Eisenhower turned aside as too technical for discussion at the time questions such as those regarding open, union and closed shops.

Eisenhower dropped in on an old friend, financier Bernard M. Baruch—who played host yesterday morning at breakfast to Democratic presidential nominee Adlai Stevenson.

Baruch didn't pose for pictures with Stevenson—but he did with Eisenhower.

Sparkman Denies Trumanites Wait For Move By Russians

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 30 (AP)—Sen. John J. Sparkman denied tonight that the administration's "containment" policy is aimed merely at checkmating the Russians or waiting for them to show their hand.

Hitting back at Republican criticism of the Truman administration's foreign policies, the Democratic vice - presidential nominee declared:

"As a matter of fact, 'Containment' has a wider, more creative, more dynamic purpose. It stands for a halt to Communist aggression, wherever that appears. But even more tellingly, it stands for the restoration of the strength of the free world as a warning to would-be aggressors."

The Alabama senator aired his views in a speech prepared for delivery at the national convention of the American Veterans of World War II (Amvets).

He Cites Marshall Plan

Sparkman cited the Marshall Plan, the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance, the various mutual defense pacts, the Point Four program and other projects as steps taken by the administration to block the spread of Soviet aggression.

"We are sharing our abundance with other countries to make them whole and strong," he said. "And we are doing all this not merely out of idealism but out of enlighted self-interest as well."

Touching on the Truman administration's post-war attitude toward Russia, Sparkman declared that "present recriminations among ourselves as to why we did not act differently are useless."

"The gist of America's policy can be accurately taken as its response when the renewed imperialism of the Soviets became manifest," he said.

Korea Move Drew Applause

Sparkman went on to say President Truman was "universally applauded" when he used American troops to combat the Communist invasion of South Korea.

"Since then, because the struggle has been long-drawn-out, and because armistice negotiations have dragged on, there is a disposition in some quarters to make partisan use of the Korean issue," he said, adding:

"Yet our act of leadership in Korea was essential to containing Soviet imperialism. It upset the Soviet timetable, kept Southeast Asia from being inundated by the Communists, and dispilled the spirit of hopelessness which had taken root in Western Europe.

"These are postive gains which have helped stabilize conditions in both Asia and Europe."

Setup Recalls Tale Of Hare And Tortoise

NEW YORK, Aug. 30—(AP)—Are Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois re-enacting the old tale of the tortoise and the hare?

Will Stevenson's flying pace at the start of the presidential race slacken and will Eisenhower pass him at the wire in November?

These questions are worrying both political camps. The next month of campaigning may begin to furnish the answer.

At the traditional Labor Day breakaway for intensive traveling by the candidates, most politicians think Stevenson has made much more progress than Eisenhower.

It is something of a handicap contest in which the Illinois governor had to start far back of Eisenhower because he isn't so well known to the general public outside of his home state. But as the Democratic nominee he has behind him a party accustomed to winning national elections and pretty well steeped in political know-how.

Eisenhower has told vistors he deliberately has slowed the pace of his camaign to conserve his ammunition until the battle gets heated.

Outcome Takes Shape Late

Most observers are inclined to think that the outcome of any presidential election begins to take form early in October. President Truman's 1948 victory, which seemingly was manufactured in the last two weeks before election day, was the exception.

Eisenhower's associates say that the August headlines aren't worth anything in November. The general himself has been quoted as telling some visitors he wants to keep himself physically fresh for the last gruelling weeks.

At 61, he may need more hours away from the grind than the younger Stevenson. At 52, Stevenson gives every sign of being able to go at top speed until November, despite a recent kidney operation. He says he expects to be elected in November "running like a singed cat."

Neither campaign is very effectively organized as yet. Neither, for instance, has the sure-footed stride and split-minute timing that marked Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's effort in 1948. But the relative political amateurs may win where Dewey was denied a victory.

A simple question can get you an argument in the Eisenhower camp.

This reporter asked one of the top men in that group "who's running this campaign?" The answer was "Adams"—Governor Sherman Adams of New Hampshire.

On the other hand, only a day or so before Arthur Summerfield, the Republican national chairman, had assured me that he was the top manager of the campaign.

That illustrates the confusion in the Republican camp. The indications are strong that Eisenhower himself has taken over the direction of his campaign—that he is beginning by now to believe that even his short indoctrination in practical politics since last April has put him in the position to make the mechanical as well as the policy decisions for his race.

Hagerty Only Pro

In the Eisenhower camp, the only pro who shows on the surface is James A. Hagerty, administrative assistant borrowed from Dewey.

Hagerty runs the arrangements, takes care of the press, radio, television and photographers with a sure hand. It is easy to suppose that he also shares in some—but possibly not enough—policy decisions.

Outside of Hagerty, the Eisenhower entourage is strictly from the state level. It numbers professional politicians who for the most part have demonstrated their ability to win in their own states but obviously know little about a nation - wide campaign.

Despite President Truman's obvious belief that the "give-'em-hell" technique is the way for a Democrat to win, Stevenson thus far is having nothing of it.

The Illinois governor, from all the signs, is running his own campaign and in his own way. He deals in subtlies scarcely recognized and hardly appreciated at the White House. He probably will continue to do so.

The pace of Stevenson's progress this early in the campaign has been geared to his canny ability to make words talk to the particular crowd that hears him.

Papers To Observe Labor Day Holiday

In observance of Labor Day, the Democrat will not be published on Monday, Sept. 1, and there will be no publication of the Capital on Tuesday morning, Sept. 2.

Recollections of Dr. John Trader From Civil War Given Into History

Father of Sedalians Wrote Corrections On Margins of Book

John W. Trader, the son of the Rev. Moses Trader, came with his family from Xenia, Ohio, to north Missouri in 1840 when he was three years of age. He graduated from the Missouri Medical College in the spring of 1860 and began service with voluntary Union groups, later (1863) becoming a brigade surgeon in the First cavalry Regiment, Missouri State Militia, during the Civil War.

Dr. Trader was twice married. His first wife, Miss Lucy A. W. Wyatt, of Kentucky, died during the war, leaving no children. His second wife, Miss Tillie E. Batterton, of Danville, Kentucky, was a sister to the wife of acting Brigadier General John F. Philips, with whose brigade Dr. Trader served in the battles of Westport and Mine Creek. Seven children were born to this marriage. At this writing two sons and two daughters, Mrs. C. E. Fletcher, Mrs. O. J. Schien, Dr. C. B. Trader and George H. Trader, are living in Sedalia, Emmett E. Trader lives in Corpus Christi, Tex., and R. F. Trader makes his home in Kansas City. Arthur M. Trader and John Trader Jr., are deceased.

Dr. Trader resigned from military service in May, 1865, and visited Europe in the interest of his profession. From 1867 until his death in 1907, Dr. Trader practiced his profession in Sedalia. During the years 1876-1877 he was president of the Missouri State Medical Association.

Thirty years after the Civil War he wrote an account of his experiences in that conflict on the page margins of several volumes of one of his histories — Battles and Leaders of the Civil War (New York: Century Co., 1887), Vols. I and IV. These books were given to the editor by the doctor's daughter, Mrs. Christopher Fletcher, and have now been given to the State Historical Society of Missouri. The narrative is reproduced below in the doctor's own words with the exception of the material in brackets which was supplied by the editor.

Dr. John W. Trader, Civil War surgeon, and subject of the historical article presented herewith.

The Rev. Moses Trader, a Methodist circuit rider in the early days of church work in Missouri.

The accompanying story about Dr. John W. Trader is from the current issue of the Missouri Historical Review and was written by Dr. Frederick A. THE RECOLLECTIONS

The events of 1860-65 (so Doctor Trader of Sedalia, Missouri, begins his story) will always remain a pleasant memory to those who stood by the "Old Flag" in those trying times. In 1859-60 I was a student in the Missouri Medical College. The excitement caused by the John Brown raid (Oct. 16, 1859) had raised the disunion sentiment in St. Louis to fever heat. Brown had been hung in effigy on the street, and the slave element was overawing everything. Dr. Joseph M. McDowell, dean of the college, commenced to organize an artillery company. Students were urged to join. The disposition to please, especially among those expecting to graduate, soon filled the company to the maximum. The day was set for mustering, and the cannon arrived from Jefferson City. They were at the railroad station.

Before the arrival of the mustering officer, the graduating class had passed their examinations and were awaiting their diplomas. The day after commencement we were requested to meet at the college to exchange diplomas where the wrong ones had been given to some. We found the mustering officer in attendance. We were instructed that when our names were called we could step a few paces to the rear if we did not wish to be mustered. With several others, I backed out. This company was among those captured at Camp Jackson.

In the spring of 1861 our sheriff received orders to enroll the militia in our county (Putnam). Quite a large number refused and set about the organization of the Union men. We simply drew up a form explaining our design and signed it. Major Dixon, (Dickson?) a man of seventy years, but full of fire and patriotism, was our captain. After our numbers reached 120, it was thought best to make two companies, and late in the summer (1861), I was chosen captain of one. We elected for first sergeant a soldier of the Mexican War who had some knowledge of drill. . . He assisted me in getting the men into line. I was fortunate in getting a copy of . . . Tactics, which I faithfully studied. We drilled every week. Some had to ride fifteen or twenty miles each week, but we rarely had to report absentees.

Before the organization of the second company we were ordered to repel an invasion from N. W. Missouri. We assembled about four miles from Unionville, Putnam County, Missouri, under the command of Major Dixon, proceeded to the town and placed the flag on the courthouse. We were called out several times and kept up our drills until the cold weather set in. In the spring we decided to join the volunteer forces, but we had a disagreeing point. General (Benjamin M.) Prentiss, hearing of our company, sent a couple of soldiers from his headquarters at Palmyra, to find out our intentions. They advised us to join the volunteers rendezvousing along the Hannibal Railroad.

Early in March, 1862, we started for Laclede, Linn County, some 75 miles south of us. The ice was breaking up and the streams were full. We hastened on, swimming the streams with our horses. The weather was so cold that our clothes froze soon after coming out of the water. We never halted or unsaddled until we reached our destination, tired, hungry, and nearly frozen. Leaving at break of day we arrived about ten o'clock at night. We were assigned to the 1st Battalion, 1st Regiment, Missouri Cavalry Militia, and had clothing, rations, horse and camp equipage issued the next day.

Everything put on the martial air, and the bugle calls soon brought us into the realities of camp life. I was requested by Lieutenant Colonel Alex M. Woolfolk to act as surgeon for the battalion during its formative period. The men of my acquaintance requested that I be appointed the regular Assistant Surgeon of the regiment. I was notified that I must be examined as to my qualifications. I went to St. Louis, passed the examination, and was duly mustered in the 1st Regiment Cavalry, M. S. M., and assigned to Colonel Woolfolk's battalion.

After getting the hospital established at Laclede, I was ordered to accompany a detachment to operate with General (John H.) McNeil in North Missouri. We went to a small town called Shelbina, where we struck the trail of Colonel (Joseph C.) Porter's forces. We followed that night to Paris. Porter surrounded the town and kept us housed all day. Late in the afternoon his pickets were withdrawn and we set out following the trail. When they crossed a bottom prairie, they made a trail some 100 feet wide, and broke the sod as if it had been ploughed. We numbered about 400, with 2 pieces of artillery — 2 lb. Mt. Howitzers. The supposition was that Porter had 2 to 3 thousand. We scrimmaged with him at Newark next day. He captured our outpost, killing 2 or 3, and wounding 8 or 10. About this time (Brigadier General Lewis) Merrill's Horse joined us with some 1200 men and 2 pieces of brass, 12 lbs., rifled.

At Kirksville we overhauled him and fought a desperate battle, from ten a.m. until sunset. (August 6, 1862). Our loss was some 15 or 20 killed and near 100 wounded. Among those wounded was General McNeil. The rebel loss was 300 killed and 1500 wounded. The captain who had charge of the burying party told me that he had buried over 200 in one ditch. I visited two of the churches and their wounded filled the body of the church, with all the pews taken out; they were lying on the floor on straw as thick as sardines in a box. We followed up next day and picked up many stragglers and 2 wagon loads of small arms, some as fine double shotguns of English make as I ever saw. I left the command at Macon City and returned to Laclede with my wounded.

August and September, 1862. — General McNeil gave me quite a compliment for services on the field. From here (Laclede) our regiment, the 1st M. S. M., was ordered to reinforce the post at Lexington, Mo., September 1862. I went from the H. and St. Joe Railroad by way of Richmond, and by stage. I assisted in the surgical ward under the surgeon, Major C. Osborn. My first surgery was done at this (Lexington) hospital. I amputated the finger of a guard who accidentally shot himself. All went out upon outpost duty, and followed Price's forces, who fought the Lone Jack battle under (Colonel Vard) Cockrell and (Colonel Jo) Shelby, (August 16, 1862) as far as Holden, Johnson County. Our battalion was under the command of Lt. Colonel Woolfolk. During this expedition I led a charge on some stragglers, contrary to the order of the captain, and would have been court-martialed had it not been for the colonel and Major (Alex W.) Mullins, who did not think such severe treatment due me. Some of our officers were averse to fighting and getting hurt; I took it upon myself to lead the charge. The captain who wanted me arrested was of this class.

From Lexington we went to Sedalia, November 1862, and about March or April (1863), to Harrisonville, Cass County; from there to Germantown, and back to Harrisonville. Then to Lexington, then to Marshall. Fought Shelby at this point. I was Asst. Surgeon, 1st M. S. M. Cav., during this engagement (October 13, 1863). On the night before the battle we were attacked by General Shelby about sundown. The second shot from Shelby's gun amputated both legs of one of our gunners. Colonel (Bazel F.) Lazear immediately mounted the cavalry and tried to form a battle line, but the darkness and rain and thick brush delayed any formation that night. I was so worn out I buttoned my overcoat about me and lay down in a fence corner in the pelting rain and was soon asleep. Colonel Lazear, coming along in the darkness, ran square up against my horse. As the bridle rein was over my arm, the movement woke me. The Colonel was using some very emphatic language. He yelled out, "Get up and mount! What are you doing here?!" I told him who I was and he very kindly apologized. He told me he had been ordered to form his cavalry, but that he found it to be nearly impossible. It would be daylight before he could get them straightened out. (He thought) I would better go to the rear to a house where General (Egbert B.) Brown was, and try to get some rest. I hastily obeyed this very agreeable order and was soon in bed and asleep.

The Medical Director was getting his first experience in actual field service. He kept waking me up to tell me he believed we would have a battle, and I had better get up. I managed to hold the fort and at day (October 13, 1863) I got up and went out to my horse.

I mounted, expecting to join my own battalion, but the Medical Director had me remain with the General. I followed the section of artillery commanded by Major (Henry S.) Suess, into Marshall, to find that Col. Lazear had routed the enemy, capturing his gun, an old smooth bore that was with General (Zachary) Taylor in Mexico.

Lieutenant Colonel Lazear, 1st M. S. M. Cav., with a battalion of the 1st., and Major William Gentry, with a battalion of Home Guards, fought this battle to a finish. General Brown, with 7th and 4th M. S. M. Cav., shelled the rear of Shelby. They procured a guide and crossed Salt River some two miles below the bridge at Marshall, and came in on the right and rear of Col. Lazear. The rebels now gave way and divided their forces. (Colonel) Gordon and (Colonel) Coffee recrossed the Salt River bridge and retreated on the line of our march. Major Suess of the 7th., with two 2 lbs. Howitzers, passed over the bridge towards Marshall; the timber and uneven ground hit us from view. The Major had no support. I rode over with him. We stood perfectly still on our horses until the heavy firing ceased in front, and then made our way into the town. I then joined my regiment and followed the retreating foe to the Harrison County line. I was (afterwards) kept busy traversing the state doing police duty until Price's raid of (September-October) 1864.

How little of the campaigning and history of the armies of the West has ever been written! While not lacking in heroic men and heroic deeds, the soldiers of the West were notoriously lacking in that necessary adjunct in every army and squadron of the East, namely "The Army Correspondent!"

In this campaign (to repel General Sterling Price in 1864) I was ordered, after leaving Jefferson City, to join my regiment near Lexington, Missouri. I was with the troops of General (Alfred) Pleasanton, and without any supplies, as all my medical stores had been captured by General John B. Clark while in transit from Lexington to Jefferson City. General (John B.) Sanborn, (John) McNeil, and (Clinton B.) Fisk were with General Pleasanton.

We shipped our horses and equipage from Jefferson City by Mo. Pac. Ry., to the Lamine, where we disembarked on account of the burning of the railroad bridge. We were all mounted by daylight and on the west side of the Lamine we soon came up with the infantry of General A. J. Smith. The General invited us to breakfast. As we had no rations and no prospect of any until much later, we gladly accepted the hospitality. After breakfast we hurried on and about noon of the next day I reported to my regiment.

Soon after I was ordered to report to headquarters as Brigadier Surgeon. I began immediately the organization of the hospital. I knew from indications that hard work was before us. At Independence we first encountered the enemy. (October 22, 1864). My brigade was ordered forward and order given for attack. A battalion of the 7th and 4th was dismounted under Lieutenant Colonel (Thomas T.) Crittenden of the 7th M. S. M. Just as they dismounted Lieutenant Mullins of the 1st M. S. M. was shot through the abdomen, about 30 steps from where I was sitting with the General and Staff. I dismounted to go to my friend. The leaden hail was so thick I had to squat as I ran, to save my life. A soldier took one arm and I the other and we dragged him to the roadside behind a large oak tree.

The Lieutenant recognized my voice and said, "I am dying?" I could only reply, "Yes." "Tell my brother, the Major, where to find me." By this time we were in a perfect shower of lead, and men were dragging the wounded about me. I ordered all to be taken into a small brick dwelling nearby. I put the Lieutenant on a bed and made him as comfortable as possible.

I heard a commotion among the ambulance drivers. It proved to be a commander of the Confederate wounded, Colonel Young, mortally wounded. . . .and forbidding my men to touch him. I soon ended the trouble by ordering him to be placed in an ambulance and sent to the house of a friend who knew him.

At nine o'clock that night I found the Major (A. W. Mullins) as I was making my way to the front. I delivered the Lieutenant's message. As my ambulance train was halted, I concluded to lie down and get some sleep. The shouting of men and the neighing of horses did not prevent me. I had been mounted all day without food or rest.

By noon (Sunday, October 23) we were moving rapidly to the ford of the Big Blue, a few miles from (west of) Independence, where the battle was renewed in earnest. The cannonading was a fearful thing. Many of the shots were overleaping the timber ridges and falling in the rear of the cavalry. I hurried on to the front with an orderly and established my flag on the banks of the stream just after our men had passed over. The rebel line was plain to be seen some three hundred yards up the timber ridge. Lieutenant Colonel Crittenden was ordered to dismount the 7th cavalry, and move one column across the stream immediately following the line of skirmishes which seemed to be driving the enemy, who very stubbornly gave way as the main body under Colonel Crittenden advanced. The Colonel received a spent ball on his belt buckle which knocked him down. Soldier near raised him up, and I was going to send him to the ambulance, but he would not consent and (went) on with his regiment.

I felt comparatively secure here as we were out of rifle range. The wounded were being brought in rapidly. I soon had the bank of the stream covered with them. I was soon in sight of the battle line. Galloping up in the rear where Colonel (John F.) Philips and Staff were standing — the Colonel relieved General (E. B.) Brown — I reported. I was ordered to keep well up in the rear of the brigade. As I started back I noticed (General John B.) Sanborn's brigade deploying as they marched on in front of our brigade, who had had the lead from Independence and were well tired out.

As I moved up my ambulance train General Sanborn sent his Adjutant to request me to look after his dead and wounded as he did not know where to find his surgeons. I noticed several drop out, either dead or wounded, and ordered the ambulance to pick them up, and take them to a farmhouse nearby. Confederate dead and wounded were there, and some 15 or 20 Confederate surgeons who had been captured by our brigade. I was formally introduced to these gentlemen, and requested them to assist in caring for their wounded. This, they kindly agreed to do, but informed me that they had no supplies. I ordered supplies out of my wagons, and then requested Major Short to keep up with the brigade. We marched until about midnight, when we stopped to allow the men to get something to eat, and to bury one of our captains who was killed early that morning while leading the skirmishes at the Battle of the Big Blue. We buried the captain near a small town called Santa Fe in Kansas. We marched with our brigade all next day (October 24) in the rear. Near night, as we approached a place called Papinsville, our brigade was ordered in the advance. About midnight, as we approached the river, it began sprinkling rain.

While riding along with Colonel Philips, Commander 1st Brigade, at the head of the column, firing began in front, one or two shots, then several up and down the river, which told us that we were up with the enemy and had struck his main picket line. The command was halted and preparations made for attack. Soon as day came (October 25) we moved out and did not meet any opposition on this (north) side the river, (Marais des Cygnes) which we passed over and through the timber out into the prairie. About a mile beyond the river we turned a point in the road near Twin Mounds, which rose on our left to the height of 200 feet in sugar loaf form. About half a mile beyond Price had his men in line of battle. (They were) dismounted and standing 3 or 4 hundred yards along a small creek called Mine Creek. As soon as our column appeared in view the Confederate opened on us with six pieces of cannon, which was in front of the battle line. The solid shot struck the mounds over our heads and fairly shook the earth. As we were ready the bugles sounded the charge and 2 or 3 thousand cavalry swooped down upon them and captured the whole outfit before they could reload and fire again. The prisoners taken amounted to between 12 and 15 hundred, with two general officers and their staff, and six pieces of artillery. We followed up our success as related by Colonel (Wiley) Britton (6th Kansas Cavalry) on pages 374-7 of this volume. (Battles, Vol. IV.)

In May, 1865, (after his regiment, with its officers, had been mustered out), I was ordered to report to Major Carpenter, Medical Director, on board the steamer Baltic, then at St. Louis, and proceed to New Orleans. I had entered the U. S. Medical Corps after leaving the Volunteer service, and had been assigned to duty at Jefferson Barracks with the rank of Acting Asst. Surgeon, U. S. We passed down the Mississippi when it was out of its banks. We halted at Cairo for coaling. The wharf was flooded and the wooden sidewalks would give way when stepped on. One of our medical officers got a ducking. He thought I was lacking in cavalry because I did not plunge in and save him. As he went down between the planks, by spreading his arms he managed to save his "bacon." It being night and the paths tortuous, we lost our way. The Baltic steamed out. Our absence was soon noted; the vessel was ordered to stop. The engineer kept up an unearthly shriek to guide us to the steamer. We got on board pretty much after the manner of General Grant after the Battle of Belmont.

The old flagstaff of Fort Pillow was to be seen on the bluff. The river was policed by gunboats, and some distance below here we pulled one off a sandbar. The commander, I think Colonel Ellet, came aboard with his staff, and gave us the first news that we had of the capture of Jeff Davis. Instead of continuing our journey to New Orleans, we were ordered to stop at Vicksburg, and take on board the remaining prisoners from Andersonville, who had just arrived. We loaded up some 300 of these poor sick creatures, brought them to St. Louis and put them in the ward at Jefferson Barracks. I never witnessed suffering to exceed that of these men, who were suffering from disease and the terrors of starvation.

On our way north, when near Memphis, we encountered the floating bodies of the soldiers who had perished by the blowing up of the Sultana. The channel and in fact the whole river was full of these poor comrades who had lost their lives after going through the war, most of them sick and wounded. We had a great deal of trouble to keep from running over them, as they were raising to the surface every few minutes. The river was full of skiffs and men gathering up the dead. We did not stop. Our own sick were in such bad condition we were anxious to get them to the hospital. They had almost every disease; many of them had the smallpox. We stopped on a Sabbath morning and buried all our dead on an island below St. Louis. We unloaded at Jefferson Barracks and then proceeded to St. Louis and went about cleaning and repainting decks. I then resigned and left the service.

All marginal notes (Doctor Trader adds) in Battles and Leaders of the Civil War, were made by John W. Trader, and relate to the personal relations he bore to the various incidents here recorded.

Mrs. Alice Blackman White Writing Book About Experiences In Operating Hotels

"I'm writing a book", said Mrs. Alice Blackman White, who for many years was a prominent hotel woman in Sedalia. "I'm telling of some of my experiences in the hotel business", she said and then added, "I certainly had some, too, and at one time I knew all about almost everybody in Sedalia."

Mrs. White has not lost her spirit with the years, and her blue eyes still sparkle behind her glasses. For many years her hair has been snow white and she has plenty to make it that way.

Mrs. White did not intend to be a hotel women, ahe wanted to have a home and family; but fate always changed her plans.

She was born Alice Hale the daughter of John and Eliza Bullock Hale, in London, Canada. Her father was a Canadian and her mother was form England. Her grandfather Hale was very wealthy and was a breeder of fast horses. Her grandfather Bullock was a Methodist minister, seceeding from the Church of England with Wesley. Mrs. White's mother, however, remained an Episcopalian and Mrs. White still belongs to the Calvary Episcopal Church. She was pleased last week when the Rev. Edward Sims, rector of the church, called on her and brought her some flowers.

There were two sisters and three brothers in Mrs. White's family, and her parents with their children moved to Marshall County, Kan., when she was a little girl, and there was she raised.

When she was grown she met a newspaper man from Pittsburg, Kan., Theodore Van Horn Blackman and married him. He was from a prominent family and his mother, who was a cripple, lived with them. Their first child was a girl, Natalie, and their second a boy, John Hale Blackman, and it was when Natalie was four years old and John Hale was two months old, that Mr. Blackman found another woman. The other woman was married, too, had two sons, whom she left with her husband and a little girl which she took with her, and after both had received their divorces she and her little girl just moved in and Alice was left to do whatever she could. His mother was crushed over the whole affair, but there was nothing she could do.

It was with a cook stove and $6 that Alice Blackman set up a bakery. She would work until 2 o'clock in the morning baking and then sell her baking through the day. She did this until her baby was old enough to leave and then she put her two children in a convent in Nevada and went on a traveling job. This was an unhappy setup both for her and her children, but it was all she could do at that time.

It was in 1906 that a man in Joplin traded a zinc mine for the Royal Hotel in Sedalia, which was located where the present post office building now stands. The building was then sold and Mrs. Blackman borrowed money and bought the building where the St. Francis Hotel is now. It was called the Gold Block building and Capt. Gold had a carpet house there. It was on Dec. 15, that she took over the building and the entire place had to be cleaned and fixed for a hotel, but on Christmas day Mrs. Blackman was ready to serve Christmas dinner.

She named the hotel The Blackman for herself, and there was a little Hagey heater that burned wood in every room. In the hall was a large coal stove and in the center of each hall was a coal and wood bin.

It was while operating the Blackman Hotel that she met Mr. White. Mr. White, so he said, had a farm and plenty of money and he thought that a woman who had a hotel should have plenty of money, too. When he proposed marriage she accepted. This, she thought, would give her an opportunity to rear her children, educate them and be with them in a home as a mother should.

She sold her hotel, paid her debts, and when all was done she didn't have very much left. She went with Mr. White to his farm in Michigan but when they got there he didn't have a farm — in fact, he didn't have anything, and he was very disillusioned — he found she didn't have anything either. He wasn't good to her and her children — so she went to Grand Rapids where she worked in the largest department store there for six years.

Then, her brother, who was manager of the Hienez Pickle Factory at Omaha, Nebr., had a friend by the name of McLaughlin who had an opportunity to buy the Royal Hotel, where Mrs. White originally started, and he bought it. He was elected to Congress and went to Washington, D. C., from his home in York, Nebr., and wanted somebody to run the hotel. Mrs. White's brother told him to talk to her and she gave up the job in Grand Rapids and came back to Sedalia, to the hotel where she had been in the first place. They changed the name to the Liberty and for a number of years Mrs. White had the hotel. She built on a large dining room and served banquets to all of the civic clubs, other organizations and even governors of the state.

Mrs. Alice B. White

She had a Negro cook, Polly, the best cook anywhere, Mrs. White said, and she served some wonderful meals.

Mrs. White was active in things then, too. The Business and Professional Women's Club was organized at her Liberty Hotel and she was a charter member. She is still a member of the American Legion Auxiliary and has served as its president several times, she belongs to the Elks Auxiliary and served as its president twice, she was a member of the DAR, the War Dad's Auxiliary, the Chamber of Commerce, the Missouri Democrats Club, the OES, and is a past president of Parley of the Legion. During the World War II she was active in the Mother's Club.

In the meantime her children grew up. She gave them all the education they would take. They both were musical, both had lovely voices. They took the voices after their father, she said, he sang for years in a Presbyterian Church where he lived. She admitted that she had a voice, too, but she never had an opportunity to do anything about it.

The girl played the piano at the Sedalia Theatre and later married. She had a little girl, Natalie Frances, whom they called "Tootie". When Tootie was about four she had some disease of the eyes and lost her sight. But that never stopped her. She did the things most girls do. She is a very talented musician and singer. She lives in Evanston, Ill., with her mother, and does a great deal of singing. She has a talent for writing, too, — both prose and poetry.

John Hale Blackman went into service when he was 16. He enlisted during the first World War and lied about his age. His mother never tried to get him out. He served overseas and when he was discharged from service he went on the stage. He dropped the Blackman from his name and became Jack Hale. He, too, was a good singer. He was on the stage some, but mostly he produced shows. Then came World War II. He served overseas in that, too, and came out of service a major. Then he came home to his mother, who by this time had retired from business.

Her flourishing business at the Liberty Hotel died with the building of the Bothwell Hotel. The banquets went to the new hotel, the Liberty Hotel went out of business and the building was torn down.

Then she established a cafeteria at the place where Beverly's now is located, but several years ago went out of business. She lives at 217 East Fifth. That was where her son came home to live with her, and then he died.

He hadn't been all she had hoped for, but he had been kind and sweet to her always, he had never talked back to her, he had taken her places, thought of her pleasure, and came back to be with her. He had been too free-hearted, had trusted people too much, she said, he couldn't hold on to his money. He knew he had made mistakes and it worried him —but he had so much good in him ,too. He was worse to himself than anybody else. The mother raised her glasses and wiped the tears from her eyes—it was hard —so hard, even yet, to give him up.

This year she is going to Winter Haven, Fla., to visit her brother, the only one of her family still living. He recently built a new home there — but before she goes she is going to finish the book — the book of her life that will be a colorful story of not just the heartaches, but the humor, the people she met in her business, the experiences of her days of operating a hotel.

"I have always been a builder," she said. "I never tore down."

Exhibits, Music, Dances and Other Entertainment

The guest book in the Pettis County Historical exhibit at the Missouri State Fair was signed by 1,800 people from all over the United States and only about one-sixth of the people who saw the exhibit stopped to sign.

The big program of the week was presented on the first Sunday afternoon but programs were given every morning and every afternoon of the fair except Thursday, the day of the tornado.

The State Fair Association was anxious to have a place for fair visitors to rest and be entertained and the rest and recreational lounge was taken over by the Historical Society to see that such a program was carried out.

The programs and exhibit were planned by Mrs. F. S. Leach, chairman, C. F. Scotten, president of the Historical Society, and Judge J. V. Kesterson and J. L. Curry.

Music and Dancing

Those taking part on the musical programs were Mrs. J. W. Watts, Mrs. T. E. Gasperson, Mrs. George Lovercamp, Mrs. Ernest Liebel, Bob and Jack Chambers, Miss Mary Jo Case, Miss Judy Case and Mrs. Mae Moser, who served as accompanist.

Young dancers taking part in the programs were Arlene Hanning, Gayle Harris, Mary Kay Burns, Nancee Homan, Justine Gloss, Janet Homan, Jo Ann Patrick, Betsy Siegel, Pete Siegel, Larry Reed, Linda Reed, Becky Thomas, Opal Carson, Sue Turk, Barbara Dougherty, Carol Lawson, Donald Whitehead, David Sparks, Karen Sparks, Steven White, Vickie Atkinson, from the Peg'ee Hewitt Homan Dancing School.

Margot Engle, Peggy Brock, Marsha Brown, Cheryl Stephens, Caroyln Leaton, Carolyn Staley, Johnnie Engle, Elizabeth Sullivan, Nancy Prowell, Patsy Middaugh, Johnnie Sauraghe, Carol Hillman, Susan Priess, Marsha Evans, Jennifer Sullivan, Barbara Zalin, Judy Ray, Russell Leaton, Linda Roe, Judy Kuykendall, Julia Zinn, Becky Hagadorin, Kay Klein, Evelyn Mitchener, Cathern Carter, Lynn Engstem, Gaylene Meusheke, Elizabeth Finch, Sharon Nugent, Karen Marsh, Karen Middaugh, Rosemay Elliott, Reba Yokley, Kay Robbins, Becky Goldin, Janice Erickson, Cora Bramble, Beverly Richards, Carolyn Bowden, Betty Deal, Jo Ann Dennis, John Deal, Louis J. Malin, Andrea Bryan, Peggy Brock, Susan Alexander, Donna Evans, Nancy Priess, Carolyn Thomas, and Patti Jo Hamblin from the Harper's School of Artistic Dance.

Pupils of Miss Dorothy Fight of Warrensburg were also on the programs.

Pictures of the beauty of Missouri which were furnished by the Missouri Division of Resources and Development and the Missouri Conservation Commission were shown. Miss Mary Catherine Scotten operated the machines which were loaned by Ed Zalin and the school sound machne loaned by Forrest Drake and Pinkney Miller.

Hostesses were Mrs. E. F. Yancey, Miss Nina Harris, Mrs. T. H. Yount, Mrs. Fred Rose, Mrs. Emery Meyers, Mrs. William Schutt, Mrs. J. C. Saunders and Mrs. Perry Reed. Some of them were in costume.

Mrs. Perry Reed of La Monte had at the exhibit a chest made from wood that was used as a loading chute in the early days on the Mississippi River at Ste. Genevieve and the millions of bushels of wheat that went down the chute left a design on the wood that looks like hand carving. H. R. Hiles of Troy brought a collection of things which included a music box over 100 years old, old bicycles, saddles, one of which had belonged to a bandit who had killed more than 100 people, and many other interesting articles.

Mrs. Fred Kueck had a collection of arrowheads, and a conch shell necklace estimated to be 1,000 years old. There were two pictures, one, "The Dairy" painted by Sir Edwin Dansweer in England in 1830. These were brought to this country by J. L. Cartwright in 1863 and were exhibited by Tom Cartwright. John Henry Brooks had a large brass kettle which was used for cooking in the early days. The exhibit had many more items that came from the home of early settlers in this country. A great many of the things from the Historical Society's museum in the Pettis County courthouse were on display, among them being the swords of Generals Eisenhower, MacArthur, Bradley, Patton and Mark Clark, and the big black bear that stands in the courthouse corridor was in the exhibit, too.

The programs and the exhibit were a lot of work but the Historical Society members feel that it was certainly worth all the time and work they put into it. The cooperation they were given meant a great deal, too, especially the youngsters who danced throughout the week and had to pay their way in to the fair every time they appeared on a program.

LABOR DAY 1952
On Labor Day, as well as the other 364 days of the year, we salute the American working men and women.
Our basic purpose for being in the profession and business of Pharmacy is to serve our fellow working-man in times of sickness as well as health.
Our secondary reason, of course, is to earn a living for our families and ourselves. We are keenly aware that the abundance of our living and the prosperity of our business is entirely dependent upon the prosperity of the working people whom we serve. For the prosperity that we have so far enjoyed we thank all of our labor friends and customers.
Our constant hope and desire is that working conditions will be more pleasant and the remuneration more abundant for all working people for all time.
Sincerely,

Lewis Urges All Unions To Unite

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30—(AP)—Mine Union Leader John L. Lewis today put out a Labor Day message telling other labor organizations they all had better unite or eventually they will be destroyed.

It was the latest move by Lewis to persuade trade unions to unite in order to accomplish their joint aims.

"American labor faces an era of danger and of threats to its very existence," said the message put out by Lewis and the United Mine Workers' other international officers. It continued:

"There are those politicians beholden to reactionary interests, and those who are still advocates of the institution of human slavery, who would take from us the only effective weapon we have in our struggle for a better America.

"There are those intellectually corrupt corporate interests in this country who would sell a free, Democratic and progressive America down the river in their mad gamble for unchallenged control of the economic future of our great nation."

The UMW statement said that labor union members want a unified labor movement but that "it is a house divided against itself" because various union leaders are jealous of each other and won't agree to unity.

"The spectacle of the segments of organized labor in America heaving and shoving in all directions—or in no direction—gives aid and comfort to those who would destroy us and institute their own modern version of serfdom," was Lewis' warning.

The Pettis County Ladies' Democratic Club met Thursday evening in the recreation room at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Trotter, 720 South Beacon.

After the business meeting and the program a social hour was held with the following women in charge of refreshments: Mrs. Ida Hays, Mrs. Jim Durley, Mrs. W. C. Cramer and Mrs. J. C. Wilhite.

City Keeps Stork Busy During Year

The flap of wings, which has accompanied the stork on his visits to Sedalia, has been muffled in the past several months by a pair of twin jets. These jets have been added as standard equipment to aid the bird in his delivery of babies as business has been much heavier so far this year.

In 1951 the stork, under his own power, was able to deliver 369 babies from January until Aug. 27. However, this year with an added burden of 43 for the same period an additional burst of power was needed for the fast trips which were required.

During 1951, from the first of the year until Aug. 27, the hospitals reported the following number of births — Bothwell, 307; Woodland, 53, and No. 2 Hospital, 9. For the same period this year the hospitals reported the following births — Bothwell, 346; Woodland, 54, and Hospital No. 2, 11.

So Sedalia's motto can now be: "Sedalia, where folks enjoy life, and life comes often."

State Plans A Change In Benton County Road

The location of Route B from Cole Camp to the Lake of the Ozarks was established by the Missouri State Highway Commission on March 10, 1936 after a hearing was held in Jefferson City. Due to new developments that have taken place at the Lake of the Ozarks and in the area of the unconstructed portion of this route, the State Highway Commission has ordered that the matter of the location of the unconstructed portion of Route B be reopened and publication be made of proposed change in location of this route.

The location as previously established begins in the SW¼ of Section 9, T-40-N, R-20-W, near the Lake of the Ozarks, thence in a northeasterly direction through Section 9, NW¼ of Section 10 and Section 3, T-40-N, R-20-W, thence in a northwesterly direction through Section 34, 27, 26, 21, 17, and 8, T-41-N, R-20-W, to south end of present construction on Route B.

The new proposed location begins at the north end of the main north and south streets in Lake View Heights, thence extends northeasterly and northerly through Sections 5 and 4, T-40-N, R-20-W, thence in a northerly direction through Sections 32, 33, 28, 21, 17, and 8, T-41-N, R-20-W, to south end of present construction on Route B.

This new proposed location has been recommended by the chief engineer, but before the State Highway Commission gives its final approval to this new proposed location, any person or group desiring to protest all or any part of this location, will be given an opportunity to appear before that body at Jefferson City to present reasons why they believe that the proper location or parts of location have not been selected and to suggest an alternate for the consideration of the Commission. Protests should be filed with H. M. Brush at 5117 East 31st Street, Kansas City 28, Missouri, and these must be filed within ten (10) days from date of this publication.

Martin To Go Before Court For Slaying

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 30—(AP)—William Merle Martin, one of the FBI's ten most wanted criminals captured here early today, will be arranged "probably Tuesday on a murder charge."

Local FBI agents said Martin will be arraigned before U. S. Commissioner William Bean for the slaying of Deputy Sheriff Willard Carver near Olathe, Kan., June 23.

Martin's arrest came a few hours after another man on the FBI's most wanted listed was captured at Texas City, Tex. Taken into custody there was Joseph Franklin Bent Jr., 25.

The 42-year-old Martin was transferred to federal custody today after he was captured heading into St. Louis in a car he had stolen from a deputy sheriff's garrage in nearby Jefferson County.

FBI agents said Martin had not admitted the Kansas slaying.

Martin's body was gashed and bruised from his wild flight through woods and over rocky countryside where he had been hiding for two days. He was haggard and weak from hunger. When arrested he said: "Well fellows, you got me. I'm unarmed. Don't shoot."

The red-haired Martin said he had hidden by day and crawled and stumbled over the rugged country in the dark to Cedar Hill, 33 miles west of here. There, after darkness, he slipped into Deputy Sheriff Thomas Powell's garage and backed the car out. The officer saw his car being stolen and telephoned the State Highway Patrol. The alarm was sounded.

Martin said the worst part of his grim hide-and-seek with the officers was not being able to smoke.

Iran Rejects 2-Power Plan On Oil Peace

TEHRAN, Iran, Aug. 30—(AP)—Premier Mohammed Mossadegh flatly rejected tonight a three-point proposal from President Truman and Prime Minister Churchill for settlement of the Iranian oil dispute that would have put millons of dollars in Iran's nearly bankrupt treasury.

In a broadcast communique, the frail but iron-willed Nationalist leader explained that U. S. and British diplomats had handed him the proposal. Then he said:

"I told them this government can never agree to this message."

He deferred the formal answer to the formal offer—which would have involved World Court arbitration of compensation due the British-owned Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. for nationalized oil properties and negotiations wth the AIOC for resumption of the flow of Iranian oil to world markets.

Despite some Iranian snubs in the past, the U. S. offered to give Iran 10 million dollars to bolster the government in its immediate crisis. Britain proposed to relax her blockade and other sanctions and help the Persian Gulf kingdom sell its oil abroad.

U. S. Ambassador Loy Henderson and British Charge d'Affaires George Middleton laid down the proposals at a 45-minute conference with the premier in his guarded residence this afternoon.

The terms were practically the same as those they discussed with Mossadegh last Wednesday. The diplomats had come away from the 3½-hour meeting looking glum.

The British Embassy said "this generous offer" was a sincere effort to end the 18-month deadlock.

The fact the offer was made jointly in the name of President Truman and Prime Minister Churchill stressed the importance they attach to restoring the economic stability of this strategic country and to blocking a possible Red coup.

Public School Is Basic to The Survival Of America

WASHINGTON — The seventh annual report of the profession to the public, released here today by the National Education Association, warns that American enterprise and ingenuity are not inherited by the children and youth of the nation but can be kept alive only by the American program of public education.

The Report, entitled "The Public School", is released by its author, Willard E. Givens, executive secretary of the NEA, as thousands of public schools throughout the nation prepare to open their doors for another acaemic year.

"American enterprise and ingenuity are known around the world," says Secretary Givens. "They are envied by some, misinterpreted by others, respected by all. At work in a free nation they have produced the wealthiest and most powerful nation in the history of mankind.

Three R's Not All

"These traits must be consciously cultivated. One of the purposes of the modern public school is to keep them vigorously alive. The public school does not regard the Three R's as the whole of education. It places great emphasis also upon those robust qualities of initiative, self-dependence, and imagination which have meant so much to the material success of the American people."

Describing the school as a "vital center of community life," Secretary Givens says, "The public school upholds for its students those freedoms which brought their ancestors to this continent. The school that subjects its students to the yoke, produces citizens who are willing to wear it."

Calling attention to the attempts being made today to weaken American ideology and to destroy American freedoms, Secretary Givens emphasizes that freedom is more important today than at any other time in the nation's history.

"Our ability to withstand the menace of communism may well depend upon the vigor with which we demonstrate the vitality of our belief in our freedoms, and the persistence with which we resist the encroachments of dictatorship upon our free public schools," he adds.

Cooperation From Home

The Report discusses the necessity of close cooperation between the home and the public school. "Time has greatly changed the home and the public school as educational institutions," it continues. "The large family home and its domestic economy in which youth were prepared for an identical domestic economy are far behind us in the stream of history.

"Modern life takes the members of the home to the office and shop and factory as well as to the field to earn a living in skills that are highly specialized. Even a large percentage of the mothers are employed. The public school has taken over in some measure many of the educational activities of the home.

"However, parents, have not abdicated their responsibilty," the Report emphasizes. "No school operates effectively very long without a high level of community understanding, interest and participation, which involves not only parents but other citizens. . . .Its program supplements and reinforces the educational opportunities which the home and the community afford. The public school is not a detached institution. . . . The close relationship of the public school to home and community is a protection against its use to promote the interests of a powerful party or the propaganda of a dictator."

Touches Every Citizen

Discussing the unifying effect of the public school, Secretary Givens emphasizes that no other institution except the public school touches the life of every citizen.

"All Americans do not belong to the same church," he points out. "They are not all members of one political party. They are not all engaged in like occupations. Their ancestors came from many countries of the world. They represent all races of mankind. . . .Our nation has always treasured differences as great sources of strength. This freedom is recognized around the world as an American trait.

"The public school is the instrument of a society of free men. It brings together all the children of a community, regardless of the economic or social status of their families, and without discrimination because of their cultural background. It provides opportunity for every child to develop his own talents and to find his future career in a field best suited to his interest and capacity, whatever may have been the vocation of his father or members of his family."

Character Development

The most important task of the public school, according to Secretary Givens, is the development of good character in the children and the youth of the nation.

"Character education takes place every hour of the school day," Secretary Givens says. "It takes place when five-year-olds learn to take turns with the new toy rather than to fight over it. . .on the playground when the 'gang' tells the trouble-maker to play by the rules or get out. . .when a disturbed adolescent shares his troubles with a trusted counselor. . when children and youth observe exemplary character in their teachers.

"The public school is a bright light in a world shadowed by the catastrophes of war and the uncertainties of peace. The boundless confidence and idealism of the children and young people in our public schools — their faith in freedom and justice — are the hope of the future."

At Terrace Bay, Ontario, the U. S. editors boarded the transcontinental train of the Canadian Pacific railway to return to Toronto, thus adding still another type of transportation to the plane, bus and water carriers we had used already. Sightseeing became a major interest as we scanned the deep woodlands bordering the railroad for a possible sight of moose, bear or other woodland creature. Beaver and muskrat houses were to be seen at frequent intervals, but we saw no wild animals.

Three of us editors had an uneasy moment when we left the paper mill in our escort's car to catch the 11:55 a.m. train. A freight engine on a switch track at the mill blocked the road while we could hear the wail in the distance of the approaching transcontinental train; but we made it to the station in time.

At this point we had been traveling together for 10 days. There was so much to do and see there was little opportunity to sit still. Now for 20 hours 30 editors were going to be penned up in two Pullman cars. We had all become fast friends but this train trip put the test to whether 30 people of varying moods and personalities could hit it off together. They did. Many little irritations simply were ignored. Some of the editors were so ebullient they staged a foot race on the station lawn at the Chapleau stop. I don't think it did some of the older fellows much good — such strenuous exercise. At 54 I chose to be a spectator.

The locomotive which pulled our train through scenic central Ontario bore a large colored crown insignia. This indicated that the engine was the same that pulled the train on which rode King George VI during his visit to the Dominion of Canada.

A long evening ahead before bedtime inspired some one of the group to get the gang together. The only place likely for such a number appeared to be the diner, but this proved to be unavailable. Someone else solved the problem after the Chapleau stop. When we were rolling again, the word was passed around the Pullmans to move forward through the coaches. We reached a dead end at the baggage car door. But lo, it swung open and in we went. So until near midnight Editor Harry Polk of Williston, North Dakota led us in song after song until the chorus almost reached perfection in practice for a special dinner event coming the following night in Toronto.

The baggage master got a real kick out of this unusual entertainment while all of us stood singing and swaying with the car as the train rounded many curves.

Upon arrival in Toronto we went directly to the Royal York Hotel for breakfast as guests of the Canadian Pacific Railways: Mr. J. Johnson, manager, the Royal York Hotel, and Mr. J. W. Berry Regional Public Relations Officer, Canadian Pacific Railways. Like all the rest, this was a magnificent meal. It became my turn to act as spokesman for the editors thanking our hosts for their hospitality.

Then followed a tour of sections of the Toronto Subway System, Canada's only subway, now under construction.

That night came a notable event, the occasion when we joined the ranks of some 175 other United States newspapermen to become members of the K. O. B. Club. An element of mystery had surrounded anticipation of membership, which was revealed to us when we received our pins at that night's dinner meeting in King Edward Hotel. The tiny corn cob emblem initialed K.O.B. means: "Know Ontario Better." After our wonderful twelve days' tour we were certainly qualified for membership.

During the banquet festivities, the editors participated in the program with original presentations and gifts to our hosts. The baggage car song practice had its reward when the editors were called on to sing, "O Canada" in honor of our Canadian friends, and to join in singing "Allouette," the traditional French - Canadian folk song, led by Hon. Louis P. Cecile, Minister of Travel and Publicity.

Another of the beauty spots of the Ontario tour was the Royal Botanical gardens at Hamilton. We spent an hour walking the paths of this garden paradise. In Hamilton we were luncheon guests of the Sheraton Hotels in Royal Connaught Hotel, R. P. Peck, general manager. Here we met leading business men and residents of this bustling Canadian city which has won renown as the "Pittsburgh of Canada." I visited with the editor of the Hamilton newspaper and casually asked if he knew of any Scrutons thereabout. There are supposed to be a lot of them in Canada — the telephone listed an Emily Scruton in Ottawa. The Hamilton editor replied that he knew a fine elderly man who had worked for many years as a printer on his newspaper, but currently was not working because the Union was striking his plant which, however, was still putting out a newspaper. So we changed the subject.

The finale of the Ontario trip was at the General Brock Hotel and a visit to Niagara Falls and the interesting moving picture sets on the Canadian side of the falls where a movie is in process of being produced. We also joined with some 350 members of the National Editorial Association for a buffet dinner and reception, a part of the latter's convention activities in which we joined, sort of getting back in harness again.

All during that wonderful trip I never had a feeling of being in a foreign land. Our reception throughout was indicative of that good old Southern hospitality one encounters in some places below the Mason-Dixon line.

Traveling by automobile out of Buffalo heading west I realized I surely was in good old United States atmosphere as we passed the Buffalo plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation where a huge sign placed by workers outside the fence read: "This Plant On Strike," and another one by the company inside the fence which read: "Help Wanted! Apply at Employment Office."

Governor Resents Columnist's Suggestion He Be Impeached

By Drew Pearson

(Copyright, 1951, By The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

(NOTE TO EDITORS: During his vacation, Drew Pearson invited several public figures with whom he has taken issue to write guest columns, guaranteeing them complete freedom of expression. One of these was Governor Fuller Warren of Florida, whom Pearson has criticized for receiving large campaign contributions from members of the gambling fraternity.

Pearson informed Governor Warren that he would print anything he wanted to write in reply to Pearson's criticism, and herewith is offered Warren's guest column. In referring to Pearson as "Colonel," Governor Warren presumably has in mind that on his inaugural day he appointed Pearson an honorary colonel on his own staff.)

Gov. Fuller Warren of Florida On The Washington Merry-Go-Round

TALLAHASSEE, FLA. — Col. D. Pearson, the conductor of this coruscating column, has invited me to fill the space today. I am grateful for his generous invitation.

Little can be said for Col. Pearson's prowess as a pugilist, but much can be said for his capacity as a chronicler. He perhaps has had no peer in the field of English fiction since Chaucer, or maybe since the translator of Grimm's Fairy Tales.

Like all gifted men, Col. Pearson has a few failings. Shortly after General William Tecumseh Sherman toured Georgia, a homeless citizen of Atlanta remarked that the General was a great man but a little careless with fire. Something similar could be said about Col. Pearson. Beyond cavil, he is a clever and cagey writer, but a little careless with facts. President Roosevelt went so far as to say he was a "chronic liar." I can't go quite that far. Col. Pearson sometimes tells the truth. Occasionally, the truth creeps into his widely read column. It may not be intentional, but it's there.

Col. Pearson usually mangles the fair form of truth when he turns his column into a vehicle of propaganda for an aspiring politician — as he frequently does. He also lacerates the beautiful body of truth when he prostitutes his column to character assassination — as he often does.

Once Col. Pearson has fathered a falsehood, he usually remains faithful to it. Many untrue statements in his column have been pointed out to Col. Pearson, but he rarely has retracted. He does, however, resort to the disarming device of voluntarily correcting trivial untruths, while sticking loyally by his big lies.

It would be impossible, in the limited space allowed me, to recount all the vast mass of misrepresentation Col. Pearson has perpetrated on his reading public. I use the qualifying "reading," because some people have been deceived so many times by Col. Pearson's fairy tales — masquerading as fact — that they have quit reading him.

It is possible, however, to make a rough estimate of Col. Pearson's total output of prevarication. Although no detailed tabulation has been kept, I estimate that Baron Munchausen's contemporary counterpart has told not less than two dozen lies about me within the past two years. Assuming I have received only my pro rata share of Baron Pearson's prevarications, this data may be projected to the conclusion that this modern Munchausen has concocted twenty-four falsehoods about every person on whom he has unleashed his yelping pack of lies.

Projecting this scientific calculation further, it can be estimated that during the past two years it has suited the purposes of Col. Pearson to smear at least 2,000 persons (this estimate is almost laughably low). Thus, it mathematically follows that Col. Pearson has manufactured, within the short time of two years, 48,000 units of mendacity. That is mass production on a massive scale! The miracles of mass production achieved by General Motors sink into insignificance when compared to Col. Pearson's assembly line assaults on truth.

Pearson has a keen and cunning knowledge of libel law. Libel laws of most States are such that a writer of Col. Pearson's uncanny skill can smear an innocent person's good reputation and yet escape conviction for defamation. Lefty Grove could not cut the outside corner of the plate with the precision by which Pearson can ruin a reputation and yet not be prosecuted for libel. With a crafty artificer like Pearson loose in the land, our antiquated libel laws afford little, if any, protection to American citizens.

At the apparent behest of his pet candidate for President, on the 3rd day of June, 1952, Col. Pearson smeared me in a column containing a curious congeries of almost incoherent lies. After making a series of untrue accusations against me, Baron Pearson advised the Florida Legislature to incorporate his charges into articles of impeachment against me.

Pearson concealed from his readers the recorded fact that the Florida House of Representatives already had rejected and refuted his stale accusations by a vote of 76 to 6. One Florida newspaper, which carries his column, apologized for Pearson's nonsensical suggestion by pointing out that he had warmed over some sour and discredited dregs which already had been thrown out by the Florida Legislature.

Space will not permit a detailed account of his journalistic gibberish, but I will cite two of the monstrosities in this Pearsonian piece of prevarication. The Potomac Prevaricator, in an obvious attempt to discredit me to benefit his pet Presidential Candidate, alleged that under Florida law I swore in an affidavit that contributions to my Gubernatorial campaign in 1948 totaled $8,825.00 In 1948, Florida law did not require that I or any other candidate swear in an affidavit what the total campaign contributions were. In 1948 Florida law merely required a candidate to file a sworn statement showing the amount of campaign expenditures known to him.

Pearson further alleged that Section 102.62 of the Florida Statutes in 1948 limited the total contributions to a Governor's campaign to $15,000. This is another Pearson whopper. Section 102.62 of the Florida Statutes at that time did not place any limit whatsoever on the total contributions to a Governor's campaign fund.

It is not easy to understand why Pearson attempted to deceive his readers about the plain provisions of this law which had been on the Statute Books of Florida for 25 years.

Although I have felt constrained to write this column as a sort of clinical contribution to the cause of truth, I want it known that I am not angry at Col. Pearson. He seems to have a certain benevolence of nature which makes it difficult for me to feel harshly toward him because of his frequent defections from fact and his recurring tramplings upon truth. Furthermore, having actively participated in politics for more than a quarter century, I do not easily become indignant at an Apostle of Ananias.

Moreover, despite his mounting mass of mendacity, Col. Pearson does some good. On rare and infrequent occasions truth creeps into his column. When it does, sometimes the public weal is served.

Even if I could I would not silence Pearson. I would, however, like to see the fearless fictioner strike a better balance between fact and falsehood — say, 50-50. That would be a great gain for truth.

THE STORY: Hector Fielding, in order to forget an unfortunate love affair, has been trying to make over the life of David Carlson, an uneducated truck driver who is interested in photography. Now Hector is beginning to realize that there are many pitfalls in "this game of playing God."

VI

THE next afternoon I was shopping when I ran into Miss Mitford. She taught me English Lit in high school, and she was my favorite teacher. She hadn't changed, except for being a little heavier and grayer and I took her to a near-by restaurant for tea.

She brought me up to date on a number of my old classmates, and then I asked: "Did you ever teach a boy named David Carlson—six or eight years back?"

"Indeed I did!" she exclaimed, setting her cup down abruptly. "I was his homeroom teacher in tenth grade. He quit school in May that year, and it was a blow to me. How do you happen to know him?"

I told her briefly. She listened with acute interest.

"It's funny, your mentioning David," she said reflectively. "Because I was thinking about him just recently. There are many cases of bright young boys who hate school. But David is, by any standards, exceptional. The day he left school, he came to me at closing time and said goodby so sweetly, such a big, manly-looking chap. I sat there at my desk after he'd gone and just cried. I thought I'd failed, somehow."

I poured her another cup of tea nd said, "You're discouraging e. You tried and failed."

"Well, possibly the years have mproved his home situation. He iid have very real family troubles, and I think that's the main reason ie couldn't adjust to school. The father drank, and sometimes got put in jail, and the home was held together by the mother. He never had a chance, you see. And he got married so young! To a girl three years older than he was—Ida Sommers. Wore spike heels to school. You know the type. Impudent little thing. Knew all the wisecracks."

"I can imagine," I said.

"Well, at any rate," she continued, "I was shocked to hear David had married her. Not the type. I'm no geneticist, but I knew the quality of David's mind.

"One night about a year ago I was coming home from a movie with my sister and her husband, and I saw David. He was with a crowd of loud, ill-dressed men and women, who were straggling along the sidewalk, taking up most of the room. He looked me full in the face, a long, desperate sort of look. But he didn't speak or give sign of recognition, and the incident has rather haunted me at times since."

• • •

WHEN David arrived that night he had a package with him. "Here," he said. "This is to replace that glass I dropped last night when I was drying dishes."

"Don't be a dope. I have seven more."

"It's the principle of the thing," answered David. Then, ingenuously, "But I didn't know what an expensive thing I was dropping. A buck and a quarter for just a glass!"

"That's called a footed tumbler," I corrected. "Kathy and I picked out the pattern years ago. Gave them to each other for birthdays and such. I've got eight goblets too."

He took down a teacup and held it up curiously. "This here cup now, I guess it was expensive too?"

"That's English bone china, and yes, I guess it was. I didn't have to buy it, though. Mother used it for years, and gave it to Kathy and me when she moved to California."

He was hot on the trail now. He held up a spoon next, turning it this way and that, handling it with gentleness and respect. "Sterling silver—that much I do know. But how much would just a spoon like this cost?"

I told him and he wrinkled his brow. "And yet you eat off it every day!"

"There's no point in having things if you don't use them."

I picked up the silver cake knife and ran my fingers over it.

"This silver was going to be my wedding present to Kathy. I bought silver with any extra money that came my way. Now I have a complete service for eight and no Kathy."

David ambled around the room, pricing each item. I jumped him. "Oh, come off it, David. The cost doesn't matter."

"I guess not, but I can't help comparing the way you live to. . . . Tell me something, Hector. How much money do you make?"

When I answered frankly, he looked incredulous.

"You're kiddin'! I make more money than you!"

• • •

HIS voice was anguished. He flung himself into the reading chair and stared around the apartment, frustration clouding his eyes. Finally he muttered, "You live so nice!"

I brought him a cup of coffee. "And you want to know how I do it?"

"Yes!" He looked at me humbly. "I'd like to know how to spend money."

For the rest of the evening, I tried to tell him. It was an interesting conversation, to me, because I hadn't ever analyzed how I did spend it. Frugality is so habit-forming. He listened as though every word was a pearl of wisdom, and I had to watch myself to be sure I didn't overstate or understate facts.

When the subject got around to clothes, he insisted on going to my closet and examining every item. "You know," he said, "I'd sure like to have me a gabardine raincoat like yours. Would you go with me and help pick one out?"

So I became his shopping guide.

Democrat Pick-Ups

Odds and Ends By News Staff

Kenny, nine years old, had had fun at the fair as only a little boy can have. He had $1.50 to spend and he spent it—most of it at the carnival grounds. Then he had just money enough left to buy a foot-long hotdog. He bought the hotdog and started for the bus—he was homeward bound—but suddenly he remembered something, something very important. He had spent all of his money for the hotdog and didn't have money to ride home on the bus.

Kenny isn't the first person who did just that—spent all their money before they realized they didn't have bus fare home—but Kenny did what most people wouldn't have thought of doing. He took his hotdog back and got his money refunded.

When he got home he told his mother what had happened and she asked in a surprised tone: "Why, Kenny, did they take the hotdog back?"

"Well," said Kenny, "they didn't want to, but I put the hotdog down on the counter and told them I had to have the money to ride home and they gave it to me."

Just what the people at the stand did with the returned hotdog the mother is wondering. They likely threw it in the garbage and charged it up to charity. —H.L.

Bryan Reports

Sedalia Minister Runs Into Croaks Of Frogs and Buzzing Hordes of Mosquitoes From the Canals of Bangkok in Thailand

By Rev. David M. Bryan
Pastor of the First Christian Church of Sedalia, Now On Round-the-World Tour.

BANGKOK, Thailand—My first introduction to old Siam, now called Thailand, was not altogether a pleasant one. I arrived at the Oriental Hotel at 2:00 in the morning to find there had been a mix-up in reservation and that there was no bed for me. A very perturbed nightman got busy with a primitive telephone and finally found space for me and my friends. I shall never forget these first impressions of Bangkok as I rode through dirty streets in the early morning hours. Everywhere homeless people were still moving about aimlessly or were stretched out sleeping on the ground. Everywhere trishaw (a modernized version of the jinrikishaw, peddled like a bicycle) boys were wandering about or sleeping in the tiny seats of their trishaws. Bangkok is a city of canals with one beside every road and in front of every house. By their lusty choruses, millions of frogs and night birds and insects added to the weirdness of the night. An army of mosquitoes added their bit by buzzing and diving about like a swarm of jet fighters. It seemed that they seldom missed. Thus were my first hours spent in the home of "Anna and the King of Siam."

Overproduction of Food

Thailand is one of those rare oriental nations that actually produces much more food than it can consume. Rice is the staple food of the Siamese but these 18,000,000 people are able to export about half of what their fertile fields produce.

Yesterday I hired a car and drove 60 or 70 miles out into the countryside just to see how the rural people live and work. Rice fields stretched as far as one could see in every direction and every field was a shallow lake. This is the middle of the planting season and every man, woman and child was busy preparing fields, plowing with water buffalo, or wading in knee-deep water and mud, tenderly placing the young rice shoots in their places. On the narrow banks that separate the tiny fields and dam the water, their swarmed the naked children and babies too young to work. The whole countryside is a shallow lake, crisscrossed with low mud dams. The people live in little grass and mud huts built on a little mound in the midst of this water. Their lives revolve about an environment of mud, water and rice. This is no less true in Bangkok, the capital of over a million people.

If you should go to Bismarck, N. D., and drive a stake directly through the earth you would come out at Bangkok, probably in one of her myriad canals.

This morning I arose before 5 o'clock to take a tour through the famous floating markets of this city. I hired a boat and began a half day cruise of the canals. Here, along the canals and rivers of Bangkok, one finds the Siamese living in their unique way, just as they have lived for centuries. Their homes front on the canals and are built on poles protruding out over the water. The canals are the highways of these urban Siamese. They are also the bathtub, the dishpan, the sidewalk, the marketplace, and the reservoir of drinking water. Rivers and canals are clogged with sampans and other types of crude house boats. Here even the temples front the waterways and in the early morning hours the water swarms with yellow robed Buddhist priests, paddling about in small canoes, begging their daily bread. I even saw a "canal hearse." The draped corpse in a canoe piloted by a Buddhist priest led the procession followed by boats of funeral musicians, professional mourners and the family.

Bathe in Canal

This morning as I rode through the congested canals of Bangkok I watched the people as they went about their morning tasks. Many were standing waist deep in the canals, bathing. Others leaned over the edge of their boats (or porches) washing their dishes or their clothes. Here in a glance one could see most all the daily activities of these Siamese canal dwellers' lives. Even the markets were afloat here. As my boatman pushed and scooted his way through the jammed waterways we met a myriad of these tiny commercial boats. There was the tiny coffee boat delivering hot coffee by the cup full, the meat boat (about one-fourth of the size of a canoe) with stacks of fresh meat, vegetable boats, boats loaded with fruits, trinkets, fish or edible sea weed. Of course there were a host of beetlenut boats from which, for just a few cents, one could buy a chew that would last for hours. I couldn't help feeling a certain incongruity when I noted among the Siamese trinkets of one boat a few packages of Colgate tooth paste and Camel cigarettes. America seems to touch even the lives of these water dwellers of Siam.

Thailand is a land of temples. In Bangkok alone there are over 300 glittering temples whose graceful votive spires flash and scintillate in the tropical sun. Buddhism is the oficial religion of the Siamese and in Bangkok alone there are over 50,000 priests. They present a colorful sight when they pour out into the streets in the morning, dressed in brilliant yellow robes and equipped with their copper alms bowls or begging bags.

White Man Unmolested

For centuries, Siam has been a free and independent nation. Consequently one doesn't find here the deep resentment against the white man that is so common in other oriental nations. Even at those frequent times when the Siamese declare war on each other (only a few months ago their army fought a pitched battle with their navy) the white man and his property are never molested.

Siam's friendly attitude toward the United States is of long standing. In the 1860s King Nangkut wrote to President Lincoln and kindly offered to stock the United States with elephants "to roam its jungles and provide beasts of burden." Mr. Lincoln thanked the king and explained that his government's jurisdiction "did not reach a latitude so low as to favor the multiplication of the elephant" and added that "steam has been our best and most efficient mode of transportation."

Thailand's good-will toward the West may prove to be of unusual importance. It is one of the hot spots of the East with China on the north and Indo-China on the east and south. It is a breadbasket that will be tempting to hungry Communists.

In the morning I will leave here to fly to Rangoon, Burma, and thence to India.

"I soon discovered that it was too much for me to read the music and wiggle my fingers and keep the thing blown up—all at the same time. So I hitched up the vacuume cleaner.

Miss Bettye Ellsworth, Bobby Ryan Married in Double Ring Ceremony

Palms, tall vases of white gladioli and chrysanthemums and two seven branch candelabra holding burning white candles formed the altar setting for the marriage of Miss Bettye Yvonne Ellsworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emery L. Ellsworth, to S-Sgt. Bobby DeLane Ryan, son of Mrs. Georgia F. Ryan, 1003 South Osage and Lt. Col., Thomas W. Ryan, U. S. Air Force, which took place at 2:30 o'clock the afternoon of Sunday, August 17. The double ring service was solemnized at the First Baptist Church by the pastor, the Rev. Thomas W. Croxton.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Mae Moser at the organ played "The Indian Love Call", and "Make Believe", and as Mrs. Joe Van Horn in yellow organdy and Mrs. Harvey L. May in pink nylon lighted the candles she played "At Dawning." The candlelighters wore headbands of yellow and pink daisy chrysanthemums, and the same kind of flowers were attached to the lighted candles they carried.

Mrs. Moser accompanied Miss Esther Meisenheimer, soprano, who sang, "Through the Years", "I Love Thee" and at the close of the ceremony, "The Lord's Prayer."

As the processional she used the Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin" and for the recessional Mendelssohn's "Wedding March."

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her ballerina length dress was fashioned of white Chantilly-type all over lace. The tight fitting bodice had a waist length jacket which buttoned to the neck with a tiny turned-back collar and long tight sleeves which were deeply cuffed at the wrist. Her full bouffant skirt was accented with the use of crinolines. She wore a matching lace baby cap, edged with pearls, which held a shoulder length illusion of nylon tulle. She carried a prayerbook with a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and tuberoses. Her jewelry was a matching necklace and earrings of crystal, a gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Rosalie Kirkpatrick as bridesmaid wore a dress of nymph green nylon tulle, ballerina length. The nylon tulle ruching ruffle bordered the tight fitting bodice and extended down the side of the very full draped skirt holding a pleated panel of nylon tulle in place. Her headdress was a halo of pale green roses which held a tiny face veil of matching tulle. She carried a colonial bouquet of daisy chrysanthemums in orchid shade.

Mr. Fred R. Keane of Norfolk, Va., served the bridegroom as best man.

Ushers were Mr. Chris Moore and Mr. Raymond Wilson.

For her daughter's wedding the bride's mother chose a dress of black and beige crepe with which she wore beige accessories, and the bridegroom's mother was attired in navy crepe. Both wore corsages of white gladioli.

A small reception was held immediately following the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. Guests were members of the family and close friends. Arrangements of flowers were used on the buffet and throughout the home.

New Book On Schools Shows How to Evaluate City System

"How Good is Your School," a new book at the Sedalia Public Library, is one that will interest not only parents whose children are starting back to their schools this week, but also responsible taxpayers who support the school system.

The book which bears the subtitle, "A Handbook to Help Parents," is by Wilbur A. Yauch of Ohio University, and it shows you how to judge intelligently the quality of your local school, and how to make it better.

Changes in methods of grading, of instilling discipline and of developing the child's best potentialities have taken place in the educational field since the time when most adults were in school. These are explained by Mr. Yauch, and may answer questions that have arisen in many parents' minds.

This is only one of many fine books on children, their problems and their education, that are on the library shelves, according to Miss Mary Kay English, librarian. Mary and Lawrence K. Frank, who parents themselves (they have six children, have written another helpful book for parents of school children: "How to Help Your Child in School" which may also be found at the Library covers a child's school years from nursery up to Junior High, discussing the routine of work and play in all grades.

Parents who are troubled by a special problem can read with profit "Jealousy in Children", by Dr. Edmund Ziman, or "These Are Your Children," a collection of fine illustrations and articles on carefully developed case studies of children.

For lighter, but still profitable reading matter, the Library recommends "Growing Together," a delightfully informal, readable book on making the family into a genuinely happy unit. The author, Rhoda W. Backmeister, deals with the broad topics of growth and mental hygiene, games and hobbies that parents and children alike may enjoy, money and its place in the child's thinking, and many other kindred topics.

Two good periodicals dealing with child-rearing problems may be read in the reading room, or borrowed from the Library. They are "Parents," and "The Instructor."

The best fiction tip of the week, according to Miss English, is "The Silver Chalice," a new novel by Thomas Costain, with a Biblical background. The book is expected to be one of the most important on the fall reading list.

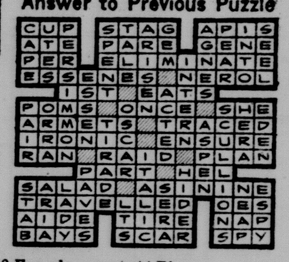
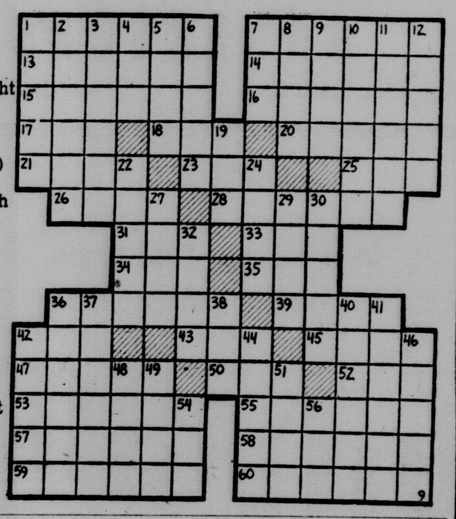
Answer to Previous Puzzle





Tyrone Is Goodwill Ambassador

ROME (AP) — Tyrone Power has been Hollywood's most successful goodwill ambassador to Italy since the war, a Rome American News survey showed.

With the postwar upsurge in production both of American and Italian films here, hundreds of Hollywood figures have come here.

The newspaper said that after Power, these nine Hollywood figures did the most to build good will for the U. S. film in Italy: Myrna Loy, Orson Welles, Marc Lawrence, Sam Zimbalist, Binnie Barnes, Gregory Ratoff, Edoardo Cianelli, William C. Tubbs and Robert Taylor.

Power was commended for the way he "captured Italian hearts" by his friendliness, quiet dignified behavior and contributions to Italian charities.

VIC FLINT
HE HAD TIME!"
BY MICHAEL O'MALLEY
LISTEN, MUSHY. SUPPOSE I DID KILL ORRIN TRIPP. IT WAS YOUR KIDNAP PLOT HE WOULD HAVE WRITTEN ABOUT IN HIS DI

What Others Say

Forrest Smith (Governor of Missouri)— COLORADO SPRINGS, Colorado — Out here in the Rocky Mountains I am seeking relief from my annual attack of hay fever. When we travel, thoughts turn back home. We recall the words of James Whitcomb Riley, who wrote: "Home—the place where we grumble the most and are treated the best."

Far from Missouri and the mansion I got to thinking about a newspaper account which appeared some time ago in which President Truman was quoted as saying that "most of the original White House furniture has disappeared."

Mrs. Smith read the article with just as much interest as I did. She told me than that many Missouri women have written her concerning the Missouri mansion's furnishings.

After reading the article about the White House furnishings she said she believed readers of this column, especially the women, would like to know about the antiques in the Missouri mansion. I made some notes about the oldest pieces. I present them here because I believe you will be interested in them.

The oldest piece of furniture in the mansion is a solid mahogany davenport with pineapple footings. It was purchased in 1840, during the administration of Gov. Thomas Reynolds. It is known to be more than 120 years old. When Gov. and Mrs. Forrest C. Donnell occupied the mansion, Mrs. Donnell had the old davenport refinished and reupholstered. It now is in our upstairs sitting room.

Next oldest piece of mansion furniture is a fine old hand-made sideboard, or buffet, built of solid cherry, which now is in use in the dining room. This attractive piece was made about 1845 by an expert cabinet maker who lived in Jefferson City at the time.

Last year, en route to the Governors' Conference at Gatlinburg, Tenn., we stopped at "The Hermitage," near Nashville, Tenn., a show place because it was the home of Andrew Jackson, President from 1829 to 1837. After two stormy terms in the White House, Jackson retired to "The Hermitage," where he died June 8, 1845, haunted by poverty and debt. At "The Hermitage" we saw a buffet which resembles the one in the mansion at Jefferson City. It is generally believed that Gov. John Cummins Edwards during his term, 1845-1849, after seeing the buffet in "The Hermitage," had a replica of it made for the mansion.

Another famous mansion article is an old solid mahogany four-poster bed, purchased in 1870. That is the year the present mansion was constructed. The four-poster bed is known as the "Prince of Wales bed." When the Prince of Wales, who later became King Edward VII of England, made an official visit to the United States, he spent two days in the Barnum Hotel in St. Louis. While there he slept in this mansion bed. When the mansion had been completed, Gov. Benjamin Gratz Brown (1871-75), a Republican, and a St. Louisan, purchased the bed from the hotel and brought it to Jefferson City. At the grand ball celebrating dedication of the new mansion, Grand Duke Alexis of Russia was one of the celebrities attending the event. He was a mansion guest and also slept in the famous bed.

Many notables have slept in this old bed since I have been governor. They include a number of my colonels, Sen. Robert Kerr of Oklahoma, and Gov. Sid McMath of Arkansas.

A solid walnut bedroom suite — bed and large and small dressers — now is in what we call the Crittenden bedroom. The 24th governor of Missouri, Gov. Thomas T. Crittenden, used this furniture in this particular bedroom when he was governor, 1881-85.

When Gov. and Mrs. Guy B. Park occupied the mansion, 1933-37, Mrs. Park found an old bird's-eye maple bedroom suite stored in the attic. Mrs. Park had this furniture refinished. It now is in use on the second floor. No one seems to know the age of this furniture. However, several persons who have made a study of antiques have seen it and all agree it is very old and valuable.

The furniture in the mansion's Gold Room was purchased from the French Room at the St. Louis World's Fair in 1904.No one seems to know the age of this furniture. Mrs. Smith recently had this furniture reupholstered in green brocatelle, and refinished in gold leaf.

Most of the mansion's old silver and china have disappeared. However, a beautiful old coffee urn has been in service for "teas" during our administration. We have learned it was in use at the mansion before Gov. Alexander M. Dockery's time, 1901-05.

A small turkey, weighing from four to eight pounds, is a good buy for a small family. Roast it for Sunday dinner, then use leftovers during the week for salads, sandwiches or a casserole dish.

Owls Seek 1st Win Friday In 5 Years Over Dow's Tigers

Coach Ralph "Stub" Dow's Smith-Cotton Tigers will risk a five game winning streak, dating back to 1947, Friday night when they receive their initial test of the 1952 gridiron season against the Marshall Owls at Marshall. The last victory for the Saline countians over the Sedalians was in 1946 when they upset the Bengals in a 13-6 battle.

Hopes are high this year in the Marshall camp for a triumph ending the long victory drought. Facts seem to back up these hopes, too, as Coach Shorty Preston has come a long way in re-building football at Marshall in his two years at the head coaching position. This season the Owls will have their most experienced squad in several years with ten returning letter-winners. The Tiger opponents will also field their heaviest team of the past five years Friday night with a line averaging over 165 and a backfield over 160 pounds.

Four Lettermen Lost

Coach Preston stated Tuesday that four men who lettered last season were lost during the summer. Had it not been for this loss the Tigers, with only one letterman, would have been facing an all-veteran eleven.

The Owls have held two-a-day practices for three weeks and Preston said his gridders were making fast advancement. In the center of the line the Marshall men will be big and experienced, but at the ends they will be using football newcomers. Top candidates for the end positions are Billy Vickery, 160 pounds; Tommy Williams, 170 pounds and Dan Duggins, 145 pounds.

At the tackle positions Preston has three top-flight lettermen in Bob Boatright, Bob Kilp and Ronnie Deal. Boatright is the heaviest of the lot, weighing 190, while Kilp is the lightest at 170 pounds. On the offensive, Deal moves to the fullback slot to give the Owls more offensive power.

Owls Strong At Guards

Don Cox, 165, and Wade Blum, 160, both 1951 veterans, will hold down guard positions, but two heavier players, Richard Hackler, 193 and Ernie Hammer, the heaviest man on the Owl squad at 215 pounds, are making strong bids for first team berths on Marshall's defensive platoon. Another guard, Marion Marcum, has also shown well in workouts to date. He tips the scales at 170.

Charlie O'dell is back at center for the Owls at 160 pounds, but he may be used only on offense as Hammer is considered a likely line backer.

Including the versatile Deal, the Owls have three lettermen backs in Allen Clift, 165-pound halfback and Donald Mitts, a, 140-pound halfback. Clift was slightly injured in practice Monday evening and Preston said it was doubtful if he would see action Friday.

May Strike Through Air

As in past years the Owls will again have a threat in their passing game. On the throwing end of their aerial attack will be one of two promising sophomores in Kent and Morris. Just who will handle the punting chores is still to be decided between Kent, Vickery and Nuckles.

Last year when the Bengals took a 27-20 triumph at the cost of the Owls, Preston's charges used the tricky short-punt formation used by the Missouri Valley Vikings. Preston refused to say whether they will continue to use this offensive.

Yanks' Weiss Again Attempts To Win Flag With Cast-offs

NEW YORK (AP)—Sometimes you can go for months without even seeing the name of the smartest operator in baseball, a quiet, almost shy individual who sits in an office high over Fifth Avenue and gently pulls thte strings which provide the New York Yankees with world championships.

Unlike some other diamond executives who readily come to mind, George M. Weiss very seldom is the limelight consistently, and when asked why, he says he would rather leave the talking to his manager, Casey Stengel, or to President Dan Topping.

There have been those who did not particularly admire Weiss or his methods, who regarded him as a cold fish and referred to him as "Lonesome George." But it is only rarely that they have been able to find fault with his judgment of ball players or his ability to outbid rivals for a man he really wanted.

What brings up the subject of Weiss at this particular time is, of course, his acquisition of the two poor old worn-out pitchers, Ewell Blackwell and Ray Scarborough, and his bringing Charlie Keller out of retirement to do a little fancy pinch hitting in the coming stretch drive.

The idea of trying to pick up some pennant insurance toward the end of a race may not be exactly new, but Weiss almost certainly has introduced refinements the past four seasons which should go in the text books. He started it when he purchased big John Mize, a National League castoff, and three straight flags testify eloquently to the success of his methods.

Johnny Sain, waived from the National League, gave the Yanks that little extra pitching they needed in the stretch last year, and it will be less than surprising if he and Blackwell and Scarborough provide the difference in the next three weeks.

It almost seems fair to say that Weiss was the first general manager to fully realize that the American League was in for a series of very close races, with the talent so evenly distributed among the top two or three teams that a single game won instead of lost might easily decide the pennant. He decided it was worth while to spend really important money to try to win that extra game. He has been repaid, and then some.

Faurot Plans Twin Offensive For '52 Tigers

KANSAS CITY (AP)—It looks like Missouri's Don Faurot plans to stick with his two-pronged attack in the Big Seven again this football season.

Faurot, who originated the split-T, turned to the spread formation last season in an effort to add strength to his young club.

He's started using both formations in practice again this year.

Missouri ranked second nationally in forward passing offensive last year although it finished at the bottom of the conference standings. In previous years Missouri, using the split-T almost exclusively had picked up most of its yardage on the ground.

Faurot expects an improved ground game but apparently he's going to rely on the spread also.

His squad went through a stiff passing scrimmage Monday. The Missourians worked without Tony Scardino, the spread formation passing specialist. An injured elbow put him out of action temporarily, but the injury was not believed serious.

Missouri meets Maryland a week from Saturday in its season opener a Columbia, Mo.

Coach Bud Wilkinson of Oklahoma apparently is expecting Missouri and some of the Sooners' other rivals to throw the spread formation at him again this fall. He's starting preparations early.

Monday he tried out some defensive arrays against the spread, working with six, seven and eight men in the secondary.

At Ames, Ia., three more players joined the Iowa State squad. Bob Clendening, the top kicking specialist, returned after recuperating from an appendectomy. Quarterback Dick Mann and sophomore Chuck Hackman also showed up for practice.

Dan Brown, the No. 2 quarterback at Nebraska, severely injured an ankle in practice, giving the Cornhuskers a setback. Brown apparently aggravated a bone break he suffered last summer.

The practice session at Kansas State was light. It was devoted primarily to new plays.

But over at the University of Kansas, the linemen got a thorough workout on blocking plus a rough scrimmage. Coach J. V. Sikes said Saturday's intra- squad game disclosed blocking deficiencies.

Selfishness Causes Divorce

BANGOR, Ma. (AP)—Selfishness is the real cause of divorce, says Paul W. Alexander, presiding judge of the integrated family court in Toledo, O.

Lack of money, and liquor are only symptoms, says the judge, a visitor here. Even the poorest people can get along together if they have the will to succeed in marriage.

He believes that automobiles make delinquency a lot easier. He doubts that movies, TV or comics contributed to juvenile delinquency..

Mueller's Bat Booms .389 Against Brooks

NEW YORK (AP)—Don Mueller of the New York Giants, who cracked out a two-out ninth inning double to decide Monday night's game against Brooklyn, swatted at a .389 clip during the crucial five game series. Don had seven safeties in 18 times at bat, including three two-baggers.

Suction Hose Unloads Fish

SAN PEDRO, Calif. (AP) — A firm has developed a slick gimmick for emptying a net-load of sardines.

The firm B. F. Goodrich Co., working with commercial fishermen, has developed a large rubber suction hose that pumps the fish from a net into a carrier boat. Capacity of the hose is 65 tons of fish an hour. The same system is used in transferring the fish from carrier boats to canneries.

Cleveland Pins Pennant Hopes On 3 Hurlers

CLEVELAND (AP) — The close American League pennant race is forcing Cleveland Manager Al Lopez to part with the tradition pitchers should get three days of rest between starts.

There is a strong chance the Eastern clubs, who play eight games here in nine days starting tonight, may see one of the Indians' Big Three—Mike Garcia, Early Wynn and Bob Lemon—on the mound to start all eight games.

Before the Easterners leave, Lopez hopes to have made up the two games by which the Tribe trails the New York Yankees.

Wynn hurls tonight against the Philadelphia Athletics, and Lemon and Garcia will follow him, Lopez said, adding:

"I'm thinking of coming back with Wynn Friday (against Boston). Otherwise it will be Steve Gromek. We'll see what happens. If Wynn pitches Friday, Garcia and Lemon also will come back after only two days rest."

The Big Three all favor the idea of more work and have been pushing Lopez to start them oftener than the customary every fourth game.

Each of the trio is within a game or two of the 20-victory circle, and with five starts apiece in the remaining 16 games scarcely could miss.

With three fine hurlers not only willing but strong and capable enough to divide the load, Lopez well might use them almost exclusively for the remaining 16.

In the last 16 games, the Big Three handled 11—all but one of them from start to finish. They won nine and lost two.

Reese Leads Jethroe In NL Theft Derby

NEW YORK (AP)—When Brooklyn shortstop Pee Wee Reese stole a base in Monday's first game against the Giants it gave him 27 stolen sacks for the season, putting him two ahead of Boston's Sam Jethroe in the National League race.

Giants-Tribe Keep Pressure On Bums-Yanks In Flag Race

By JOE REICHLER
AP Sports Writer

The New York Giants still believe in miracles and the Clevelands refuse to vanish from the race.

Thus the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Yankees must extend themselves to the limit during the final three weeks of the campaign if they are to meet in the October World Series.

The Yankees own a two-game lead in the American League race but must play all but three of their final 16 games away from home. The Indians have the same number of games to play, but 14 of them are in Cleveland. The Yankees and Indians meet only once more this season, but that game, too, will be played in Cleveland.

Neither the Dodgers nor the Giants has a schedule advantage. Each club has 10 to play at home and three on the road. But the Giants are comforted by the fact that they are better off this season than they were a year ago today.

Last year at this time, the Giants trailed the Dodgers by 6½ games. Tuesday, following Monday's split of their day-night doubleheader, New York was only five lengths in back.

The Giants' desperate bid to overtake the Dodgers appeared to have been stopped when the Dodgers crushed them, 10-2, in the afternoon clash, but Leo Durocher's gallant crew bounced back to win the night portion of the twin bill, 3-2, to barge back into the thick of the battle.

A two-run sixth inning homer by Alvin Dark and a ninth-inning, two-out double by Don Mueller won for the Giants after Black's brilliant relief hurling and Duke Snider's power hitting had given the Dodgers an easy first-game triumph.

"They'd better not stop to look back because we're coming," shouted Dark following the split that gave the Giants a three-to-two edge in the five-game series. "This was one we had to win and we did it."

Manager Charlie Dressen of the Dodgers retorted:

"If we'd have won this one, they wouldn't have a chance. But they've still got to go like hell. We won't blow it this year. I'm satisfied. I figured if we could win two of the five games we're in and we did."

Giant skipper Leo Durocher thought differently, naturally.

"All I know is we were five games back with nine to go last year," he said. "That I know. Now we're five back with 19 to go."

Grid Eagles Name Jim Trimble Coach As Millner Quits

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Big Jim Trimble took over today as head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles to face the man-sized assignment of tackling the champion Los Angeles Rams within five days.

"I really stepped into a frightening position," admitted the former University of Wichita mentor after leaning last night he had been named to succeeded the ailing Wayne Millner.

The National Football League Eagles meet the powerful Rams Saturday in Philadelphia under their fourth coach in three years.

Vince McNally, the Eagles' general manager, handed the head coaching reins to the 34-year-old Trimble last night shortly after he accepted Millner's resignation. Trimble had been line coach under Millner.

Millner later accepted McNally's offer to remain with the club as assistant to the general manager in charge of player personnel and game scouting.

The 39-year-old Millner took over last year early in the season after the late Alvin (Bo) McMillin had been forced to retire, also because of poor health. McMillin had been named to succeed Earl (Greasy) Neale after the 1950 season.

Trimble, who played tackle under McMillin at Indiana University, said he expects to continue Millner's basic T formation offense "and most of the other plans we worked out together."

Koreans Ask Help for All This Winter

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—Reliable reports received here today said the Korean government is drafting a strong demand to the U. N. Korean Reconstruction Agency to do something to help it care for millions of war-weary South Koreans during their third wartime winter.

Persons close to the situation in Korea said the Korean government is appalled at the prospect of going through the winter on the present schedule of relief and reconstruction. The government estimates there are 10 million refugees in its borders.

These persons said the South Koreans want J. Donald Kingsley, agent-general of the U. N. Korean Reconstruction Agency (UNKRA) to move his principal headquarters to Pusan so he can organize his work on the spot. A spokesman for Kingsley here said the agent-general has made five trips to Korea since receiving his appointment in 1951 and was planning to make another tour within 10 days.

A UNKRA spokesman pointed out that the agency was created by the 1950 General Assembly for the rebuilding of Korea after the war. He said it has an agreement with the unified command to start full operations 180 days after hostilities cease. "We are ready, able and willing to go ahead when we get the chance," the spokesman said.

The Koreans complain privately that agency people are sitting around offices in the U. N. headquarters, also in Geneva, Washington, Tokyo and Pusan making plans but that little is being done. Apparently desperate for projects now to alleviate their plight, the Koreans want to know why the agency cannot set up projects at once and push them through.

The agency spokesman reported that UNKRA has sent to Korea 210,000 eggs from which 150,000 chickens were hatched for breeding purposes. UNKRA also sent several hundred pigs and goats in an air lift to replenish Korean stock.

UNKRA was pledged 205 million dollars by U. N. members, except the Soviet Bloc, and the UNKRA spokesman said the agency has received $18,120,420 of the amount. It appears to some Koreans and UNKRA officials that the countries are waiting for UNKRA to go into full operations after hostilities cease to finish their payments.

Informed sources said all relief sent to Korea is channeled into the U. N. Army's relief organization, the U. N. Civil Assistance Command.

1,500 Communists Once Taught In US Schools, Colleges

NEW YORK (AP)—Some 1,500 Communist party members once taught in the nation's schools while Red cells were located on many leading college campuses, a U. S. Senate subcommittee has been told.

This picture, says Dr. Bella V. Dodd, represents the situation before 1949 when she was expelled from the party. She had served as a member of its National Executive Committee.

Dr. Dodd, a former Hunter College instructor here and now an attorney, testified yesterday before the U. S. Senate internal security subcommittee.

Sen. Homer Ferguson (R-Mich), who presided, said the hearings are part of an inquiry to determine "whether or not organized subversion is undermining our education system."

Close Governorship Races In N. H. Today

CONCORD, N. H. (AP)—A close Republican gubernatorial contest plus a two-man toss-up in the same race on the Democratic side was expected to bring out a near-record turnout of voters in today's primaries.

Three candidates for the Republican gubernatorial nomination appeared to be running neck and neck in pre-primary forecasts as the polls opened at 7 a. m., Eastern Standard Time. Polls close generally at 5 p. m.

Skunk Cabbage Harvest

WILLOWS, Calif. — (AP) — No survey of natural resources is likely to list the lowly skunk cabbage, a plant spurned alike by men and livestock on forest lands. But the hitherto useless weed, which goes under the scientific name of Veratrum Californicum, is the basis of a thriving infant business in the higher regions of the Mendocino National Forest in Northwestern California.

Russ Bacon, resource manager of the Mendocino headquarters here, explains that the harvesting of the Skunk Cabbage developed through the accidental discovery that the root of the plant was valuable in the preparation of a new drug which is used in the treatment of high blood pressure.

The harvest is being carried out in such a way that the digging up of the Skunk Cabbage plants will not develop spots to start erosion, Bacon explained, because as soon as an area is dug it is planted to native grasses. The twofold result he says, is increase in forest revenue and improvement of the high mountain meadows where the plant grows.

Egypt Cabinet Okays Cutting Up of Estates

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt's day-old Cabinet led by strongman Maj. Gen. Mohammed Naguib today okayed Army - backed measures cutting up the nation's big landed estates and reorganizing political parties with the eventual aim of dissolving those now existing.

The 51-year-old Army commander's new government announced after a 9½ hour session — longest in Egyptian history — that it had approved legislation limiting ownership of arable land to 200 acres per person.

In a statement issued after the meeting, Naguib described the legislation as "the first step towards rebuilding Egypt's social and economic structure."

The powerful Army chieftain, who became sole ruler of Egypt by taking over the premiership Sunday following the resignation of Premier Aly Maher, added more weight to his already extensive authority today.

A royal decree, issued by the authority of the Regency Council functioning for the infant King Fuad II, named Naguib military governor of Egypt under the martial law proclaimed following the Jan. 26 fire riots in Cairo.

Naguib also heads the War and Navy Ministries in his own Cabinet and is commander-in-chief of the armed forces. He led the Army coup which ousted King Farouk July 26.

The measure, approved by the Cabinet today, calls for expropriation of all land above 200 acres under single ownership within five years. One fifth of the total is to be taken over each year.

Other provisions include: ....

Expropriated landowners will be entitled to pensions amounting to ten times the rental value of their land. These pensions will be payable by government bills over 30 years.

Landowners, however, also are given the right to sell their lands before they are taken over by the government. The price must not exceed 10 times its rental value.

Sabre Pilots Destroy Seven MIGs Today

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — The U. S. Fifth Air Force said Sabre pilots today destroyed seven Russian-built MIG15s and damaged 10 others in the sixth straight day of jet battles over Northwest Korea.

The Allied victories raised the bag of Communist jet fighters in September to 29 MIGs destroyed, one probably destroyed and 27 damaged. The record for a month is 44 Red jets destroyed last April.

South Korean and Chinese infantrymen battled furiously into the fourth day for control of Capitol Hill on the Central Front.

Troops of the crack Republic of Korea Capitol Division pulled back off the slopes of the shell scarred height to give U. N. artillery a wide open shot at the Chinese.

An Allied officer said "as of this morning nobody owns the hill."

Gritty ROK infantrymen counter-attacked the Chinese five times in the face of the heaviest Red artillery barrage of the war — 48,000 rounds. They reached the hill crest Monday but were thrown back.

The U. S. Eighth Army said the Reds in the 24-hour period ended at 6 p.m. Monday night raked the Capitol Hill sector with 15,000 rounds of artillery and mortar fire.

Much of the fighting has been at close range — with hand grenades, fists, clubs and daggers.

The Eighth Army estimated Chinese casualties at 954 killed and wounded in the first 14 hours of fighting.

Chinese in the west early this morning threw a probing attack against U. S. Marines on Bunker Hill on the Western Front but were driven off.

B29 Superforts from Okinawa dropped 200 tons of bombs on Yangdok, a rail center midway between the North Korean capital of Pyongyang in the west and the shell-wrecked East Coast port of Wonsan. The Air Force said Yangdok recently had been built up as a supply base for Red troops.

Three Underworld Figures Feel US Crackdown on Crime

WASHINGTON (AP)—Three of the biggest figures in America's underworld—Frank Costello, Joe Adonis and Anthony J. Accardo—felt the weight of a new government crackdown on crime today.

In swift action yesterday:

1. The Justice Department announced it will try to strip American citizenship from Costello, Italian-born racket czar who came to this country at the age of 4. Loss of citizenship could lead to deportation proceedings.

2. A federal grand jury indicated Adonis and Accardo for contempt of Congress, a charge stemming from their refusal to answer questions before the Kefauver Crime Investigating Committee last year. Conviction would entail both fines and jail terms.

Atty. Gen. McGranery said the attempt to cancel Costello's citizenship will be based on a charge that the dapper gambling operator who grew up in New York's tough Hell's Kitchen section neglected to disclose a criminal record when he applied for naturalization papers in 1925.

Glycerine will keep frost off windows.

Sparkman, Adlai Are 'Sole Mates' He Says at J. C.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Confidentially, the Democratic vice presidential nominee has a hole in his shoe, too.

And that, Sen. John Sparkman told a Democratic women's meeting here last night, makes him and Gov. Adlai Stevenson "sole mates."

Stevenson, the Democratic nominee for president, had the hole in his shoe shown to the world in a picture taken in Michigan last week.

Last night Sparkman jokingly said the hole in Stevenson's shoe was "the closest thing to an issue" the Republicans had been able to develop.

"And," he added, "Gov. Stevenson has taken that issue away from them—he's had his shoes half soled."

The Alabama Democrat admitted ruefully he had a hole in his shoe, too. But he hadn't known about it until his daughter discovered it.

"Frankly," he said, "I don't know when I'll have time to have my shoes half soled."

One of Top 10 FBI 'Wanted' Men Taken

BEAVER FALLS, Pa. (AP)—The FBI announced early today the capture of one of the nation's 10 most wanted criminals. He was identified as Leonard Joseph Zalutsky, 37, formerly of Allentown, Pa.

Fred Hallford, agent in charge of the Pittsburgh FBI office, said Zalutsky was taken into custody tonight by Detective Theodore Smith at Beaver Falls.

Zalutsky was serving a life sentence for the murder of a Miami police officer when he escaped from the State Prison at Railford, Fla., on Sept. 1, 1951.

It is believed that apple trees were taken to England during the period of the Roman occupation.

Sen. McCarthy Fate In Hands Of Voters Now

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Wisconsin voters, perhaps one million strong, will decide today the political future of GOP Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy.

The prospect of warm weather was expected to boost the normal vote total by about 400,000 in this primary election which has generated bitterness and controversy across the nation.

The state's 3,224 polling places were due to open about 8 a. m., and some of them were to remain open as late as 9 p. m.

The issue at stake was the methods used by McCarthy in his drive against the Communists he claimed were in the Democratic administration. Some people saw this campaign as the highest type of "Americanism." Others a "smear" campaign recklessly tainting the characters of innocent people.

McCarthy's chief opponent was Leonard Schmitt, an upstate attorney who relied on marathon radio talks to carry his anti-McCarthy message to the people of Wisconsin. Four other opponents weren't expected to be any real factor.

McCarthy was favored to win his second senatorial nomination The unknown factor in the race was this:

How many Democrats had switched their vote to support the anti-McCarthy Republicans?

Wisconsin election laws permit such cross-voting because voters are not required to register by party affiliation.

A trend in the voting might not develop unfil after midnight due to a slow count resulting from long lists of candidates seeking local offices. In Milwaukee County alone there are 76 candidates running for the office of sheriff.

Episcopalians Consider $6 Million Budget

BOSTON (AP)—Representatives of both legislative branches of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the U. S. A. and of its woman's auxiliary, meeting jointly, considered today a suggested annual budget of nearly $6 million.

As recommended by the church's national council, $5,805,659 annually would be required for the next three years for a program of missionary and education work and support of the churches.

The amount sought is $171,042 above last year's budget. Included is a recommended $169,666 annually for chapels and supplies for the armed forces.

Also planned at the session was a memorial service for the Very Rev. Claude W. Sprouse, dean of Kansas City, Mo., cathedral, who dropped dead yesterday moments after he was elected convention president of the house of deputies.

Meeting together for their first business session were more than 600 delegates to the house of deputies, some 150 bishops and 800 representing the woman's auxiliary.

Ewing Calls For Repeal Of T-H Law

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing today called for repeal of the "coercive Taft-Hartley Act" and control of inflation by putting "a ceiling on greed."

In a speech prepred for delivery to the convention of the International Association of Machinists, Ewing said the government "should support the maintenance of steady wages to the workers.

"I look forward to improved legislation for workmen's compensation and unemployment insurance," Ewing said. "These do not necessarily have to be federal measures. The states can and have played a magnificent role in the past—in these reforms."

Calling for progress to "reduce insecurity in illness," Ewing said that at best, half the people in the United States are not covered by any form of hospital or medical insurance.

He told the 1200 members of the IAM assembled here that he was opposed to Taft-Hartley because it restored the power of injunction against unions and added that "your union safeguards your wages and your working conditions.

"That is why I am glad to see you 750,000 strong," Ewing declared.

Argentine Swimmer Fails In Attempted Record Swim

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Overcome by exhaustion, Antonio Abertondo gave up today 40 miles short in his bid for a new nonstop swimming time for the 292 miles of Mississippi River between St. Louis and here.

The Argentine distance swimmer, who twice swam the English channel and negotiated the Strait of Gibralter in record time, was pulled from the water at Point Pleasant, Mo., at 7:50 a. m. (CST) today.

O. W. Chilton, newspaper publisher here, said Abertondo's party reported the 33-year-old Argentinian was more or less paralyzed from exhaustion.

Abertondo had fought a terrific struggle with the Mississippi on a vicious back bend of the river near New Madrid, Mo., through the night. The bend, known to all experienced rivermen as one of the river's most treacherous points, is full of whirlpools and cross currents.

After Abertondo was picked up by his party, traveling in three boats, he was speeded here.

Abertondo, a protege of the late Eva Peron, was after the unofficial record held by John Sigmund, St. Louis butcher who negotiated the distance in 89 hours, 52 minutes in 1940.

The distance swimmer had logged 262.3 miles when he emerged from the water. His trainer, Carlos Artuz, insisted Abertondo board the boat after the swimmer's legs became paralyzed. The water temperature was 58 degrees.

Two-Ton Safe Moved Safely On Ohio Street

While "Sidewalk Superintendents" looked on at what they thought was a major operation Tuesday morning, George Chamberlin removed a two-ton safe, with the use of two wreckers, from the second story of the building to be occupied by the S. S. Kressge Company, 308-10 South Ohio.

To Chamberlin, the job was just "old stuff, a little different." The large derrick of one wrecker was hoisted into a window on the south side from the alley and the safe was let down into a smaller wrecker. The weight of the safe made it necessary to counter balance the front of the truck.

Chamberlin said the movement, from the time he started until the safe was delivered to the Terry Hotel, took two hours and 15 minutes.

The safe belongs to the local Teamsters Union.

Defense Costs Have Passed High Point

WASHINGTON (AP — A government economist says the golden tide of defense dollars is leveling off far ahead of schedule—and may wash some of the props from under business in the process.

Robert C. Turner, a new member of President Truman's three-man Council of Economic Advisers, gave this surprise appraisal yesterday as he took his oath of office.

In a brief speech, and later in an interview, Turner told of new government studies which he said show that defense spending and production already have virtually reached their peak.

Earlier forecasts, by Truman and his mobilization chiefs, had indicated a steady, continued expansion until mid-1953. This projected expansion—as well as current spending—had been a big stimulus to business.

Turner, 44-year-old business professor at Indiana University, pictured the nation as standing now at a crossroads where it must face an end to further substantial increases in defense spending—with far reaching effects on business and on the vast program by which the government attempts to guide the economy.

As Turner put it, this means it will be "a difficult and delicate job to maintain our present prosperity." At another point he said continued growth and stability will require "economic statesmanship of the highest order."

One offshot of the new situation, Turner indicated, might be a further easing of direct controls on prices, wages and materials. Instead of asking the public to spend less, the government might encourage more private buying to try to keep business growing.

Another effect, if the outpouring of defense outlays levels off at present rates, would be a reduction in the government budget considerably under present estimates.

"We've had an expanding economy for two years—an expansion forced by the defense program," Turner told a reporter. "Now we can't count any longer on a forced expansion. We will have to do some hard thinking."

Government defense spending totaled more than four billion dollars in June and July and over three billion in August. Turner foresaw a high level plateau of monthly spending somewhere around the four billion figure.

Texans to Put Stevenson's Name on Ballot

AMARILLO (AP — Texas Democrats today clapped approval of Gov. Allan Shivers' demand that they put Adlai Stevenson's name on the ballot without endorsing him or the national Democratic party's platform.

They cheered and yelled when he shouted he wanted to see "an end to Trumanism in this nation."

The governor said that political morality demands that they certify Stevenson as the Texas party's nominee for president.

Shivers insisted that such action should not be taken as an endorsement of Stevenson and that Texas Democrats should follow their consciences when they vote in November, without impairing their party membership.

Shivers himself will not vote for Stevenson.

Prolonged cheers roared from the delegates when Shivers said: "It is time for straight talk and straight thinking. In plain words, a great many Texas Democrats are dissatisfied with the nominees and platform of the Democratic party."

Shivers' statements on the necessity of certifying the national party's nominees brought some shouts of approval, but applause on these sections of his speech was mostly polite clapping. The howling and yellow came when he was riding roughshod on the national administration.

Shivers called on the Democrats to follow a path above suspicion and reproach in the face of his and many others' stern personal opposition to Stevenson.

He made the issue clear as Texas Democrats for the first time in their stormy history faced a showdown on whether to run a Republican as their presidential nominee. It was a clear-cut choice between Stevenson and Dwight D. Eisenhower.

A militant, never-say-die block of states righters came into the convention ready for a last-ditch fight on a resolution naming Eisenhower as the nominee of the Democratic party in Texas.

Never before has such a resolution been prepared for a Texas Democratic convention.

Price Controls Controversial Among Women

FRESNO, Calif (AP)—Federal price boss Tighe E. Woods knows today, if he didn't know before, that price controls are a controversial subject among housewives.

Woods subjected himself to a heated two-hour session here yesterday in which some 400 women gave him their views on the value of controls. The meeting was the first of several Woods plans throughout the country.

The sentiment was so divided that Woods commented:

"I see this is still a country of individuals."

One group told the new price chief controls at the consumer level were the housewife's last stand in the battle against inflation. Another asked even stronger controls.

Those opposing controls branded them un-American and unnecessary. Several women declared competition and the law of supply and demand would take care of rising prices if controls were lifted. They also decried the cost of administering controls, which an OPS official said amounted to 50 cents per capita per year.

Mrs. Thomas la Faut was just as positive controls should be retained.

"I don't think this is the time to rely on the law of supply and demand to take prices down," she said. "If inflation continues, the cost of defense mobilization will go up and that will come out of our taxes."

New Swim Suits Are Previewed; They're Elegant

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Cole of California previewed its 1953 line of swim suits today.

The showing had seven models that looked more appropriate for the boudoir or ballroom than the beach.

One is named "Zsa Zsa" after the glamorous Hungarian of the same name. It's a black velvet affair, loaded with plenty of costume jewelry, and could easily pass for the upper half of one of Miss Gabor's evening formals.

Another called "Sheer Formality" is a negligee-like one-piece linen - and - organdy shorts suit, plus jacket. Still another is "Treasure Chest," made in jeweled nylon laton and comes with a silk gauze coat.

Maker Fred Cole swears that all can be worn in the water, but conceded that they are designed primarily for sun bathing and male-catching.

At the other extreme is a suit designed for women whose swimming is the channel, or serious, variety. Called the "Esther Williams," it was made to her specifications of lightness and figure flattery.

Between the two extremes Cole showed a line which featured more attention to hip and leg lines than in previous years. Cole believes there has been undue attention to bosoms, to the neglect of milady's other figure problems. Hip interest is accented by a side fanning skirt, swathing of fabric around the hips, and all around pleats.

Cottons and the new synthetics, especially orlon, dominate the fabrics. The maker predicts a swing to darker colors by next summer with many sharp contrasts. Pastels may hold throughout the coming winter resort season.

The bosom is not entirely forgotten in the line. Featured is a telescope bra, which expands or contracts to meet any and all demands.

SECOND MAN on the Ticket

By Edwin Lanham

Copyright by Edwin Lanham. Distributed by NEA Service, Inc.

THE STORY: Willis G. Warburton, candidate for Vice President, is having a smooth-running campaign. Members of his party include his biographer Roy Mason, press secretary Bill Evers, personal secretary Lucy Strawn and others. Then comes a telegram that Clyde McDonald, newspaper columnist, is joining the party.

• • •

II

STILL frowning, Bill Evers, Gov. Willis G. Warburton's press secretary, said, "The poker games aren't important. What worries me, Governor, is why that columnist is coming aboard in the first place."

"There's some importance to a Vice Presidential campaign, Bill," the governor said mildly.

"Now you know what I mean, Governor," Bill said. "Clyde McDonald thinks he's considerably more important than any Vice President that ever lived. If he left Washington to board a campaign train, it would normally be the Presidential candidate's train, and the other party's candidate, at that. So why does he suddenly descend on us?"

"Let him come," the Governor said. "My life is an open book." He grinned and pointed at the copies of Second Man on the Ticket, stacked on a table. "There it is."

"You never opened it, Governor," I said.

"It wasn't necessary, Boswell," he said. "I'm familiar with your prose style." He turned again to Bill Evers. "Now, why don't you stop worrying for the rest of the day, at least until Mr. McDonald comes aboard? And, Roy, maybe you and I had better get busy outlining that speech for Hydetown."

I said, "Okay," and got up. Lucy Strawn began putting away the cards, but Bill Evers stood by the window, looking thoughtful and depressed. He said over his shoulder. "I wonder if that's it. You suppose he's here because of Hydetown?"

He tapped his fingers impatiently on the windowpane. "Maybe that's it. Vice Presidential candidate visits his old home town for the first time in 30 years. Big reception. Big clambake. Yes, I suppose that might interest Clyde McDonald. Maybe he thinks he can dig up some dirt in Hydetown."

"It's farm country," the Governor said quietly. "Best dirt in that part of the state."

"Still," Bill said, "I'm going to find out just what he's after. I'll get it out of him somehow." He gave Lucy Strawn a speculative glance as she bent to put the cards away. She straightened, turned, and met his eyes. She stood quite still for a moment, looking at him.

"If you were only blond," Bill said. "He goes for fluffy blondes."

• • •

THE reason I was aboard the train was to write the Governor's speeches. Customarily he outlined in a general way what he wanted to say and I knocked out a fast draft of it. Then he went to work with a pencil and I did a rewrite, then the pencil came out again before he gave the script to Lucy for typing.

His rise in politics was largely due to his singular directness, a refreshing quality among politicians. He had been born on a Hyde County farm, but had moved out of the state as a young man and had become a contractor in a small Middle Western city that had begun to expand soon after the turn of the century. The Governor had made a fortune in the early days when automobiles made good roads necessary, and his start in politics had been as highway commissioner. In that post he had uncovered graft in highway construction and his hard-fisted investigation had led to his nomination and election as governor.

Other facets of his career were the sort that endeared him to uncritical lovers of a leisurely, gregarious life, but not necessarily to the voters at large. He was an astute poker player, and he could hold his liquor manfully. He was an improver of the breed, and had once raced a small string of horses. As governor, he had put through a bill legalizing parimutuel betting, and the race tracks had returned to the state, bringing revenues that helped him to abolish a 2 per cent sales tax instituted by his predecessor. These were among the qualities that recommended the Governor to me, but I had laid no emphasis on them in the biography.

"And here I am going back to my home town as a candidate for Vice President," the Governor said.

Instead I had stressed the hard-headed businessman, the progressive representative of American industry, the man who would do his part toward balancing the budget and putting the nation on a sound financial basis and even, if the economy were propitious, reducing taxes a notch or two.

• • •

THE Governor led the way to the observation platform, sat down and put his feet on the railing. He was a big man, with only a slight overlay of fat, and in his movements and his postures there was no self-consciousness at all.

"Roy," he said, "I'm a sentimental man."

"Okay," I said. "We'll have some babies for you to kiss next stop."

The Governor rewarded me with a patient smile. "I've been thinking about Hydetown," he said. "Like the lady who never forgets her first lover, I guess a man never forgets his boyhood home. It will always be the best little town in the country for me."

I had looked it up and I said, "Population 3220. Rotary meets on Wednesday."

"Population was about 1200 when I left there," he said. "I don't recall any Rotary Club, but there was an Odd Fellows Hall, of course, and a couple of pool parlors. I suppose it was primitive, even in those days, but it was a nice, friendly town, and I liked it. I used to have a couple of good friends in Hydetown, but I lost track, and you know, I'm wondering if they'll be at the station when this train rolls in. It will make me feel pretty good if they are."

"The whole town will be at the station, Governor," I said. "The county chairman out there, a fellow named John Mills, has been working overtime."

"Oh, I know Johnny Mills," the Governor said. "We were boys together. He pulled the record catfish out of the river one summer. He's one of the two I was talking about."

"You'll see him at the station," I said. "He's in charge of the reception. He and the mayor, a fellow named Melvin Fisher. I guess you know him, too."

The Governor chuckled. "I guess that burns Mel Fisher up, Roy, arranging a reception in my honor."

"He's not one of those pals of yours, then?"

"Hardly," the Governor said. "In school we called him Meathead Fisher. We never called him anything but Meathead. Everything he did went wrong. Roy, I guess you know my wife came from Hydetown, too."

"Governor," I said, "I wrote a book. If you take the time to read it you'll find out how much I do know."

"I'll read it one of these days, Roy," he promised. "After the campaign. Meanwhile, I'll tell you something that's not in your book. I cleared out of Hydetown because I wanted to make some money in a hurry, and Melvin Fisher was one reason for that hurry. His father left him a tidy pile, by Hydetown standards, and he was carpeting Ruth's front porch with American Beauty roses, long stem. I had to get out and hustle, and as soon as I had train fare to Hydetown and double fare back and something left over for furniture I went back there and poked around among the roses and I found Ruth and married her."

"Ruth told me she never intended to marry anyone but you, Governor," I said.

"Well, maybe so," the Governor said, and grinned. "But Melvin Fisher had bought a ring and a dress suit and had picked out the preacher. I'd like to have seen his face that night when he came around with his bouquet of American Beauties. We were already on the train by then. And now here I am, 30 years later, going back to the old home town as a candidate for Vice President of the United States, and Melvin Fisher is mayor of the town and has to give me a big welcome at the station. Poor old Meathead."

HE took his feet off the railing and clasped his hands between his knees. "Never mind all that," he said. "Let's get busy on that speech."

When the Governor started work on something, he liked to see it through, and it meant intensive work for me. I had to check some statistics, then I roughed out the speech, and when he had corrected it after dinner I completed the rewrite. It was late by the time I had finished, and I shared a nightcap with Bill Evers, who was waiting for Clyde McDonald to come aboard at Marketville. Bill looked gloomy.

"I met that guy McDonald at a governors' conference," he told me. "Roy, he's the kind you've got to watch every minute. You say something casual and innocent and he'll put a twist on it that will curl your hair. I'm worried."

"I think the Governor can take care of himself, Bill," I said.

"Sure he can—in a clean, open fight. But you know how he is. Part of his appeal is that he tends to think the best of everyone, and you know it. He'll talk free and easy and Clyde McDonald will find something to pounce on."

"Bill," I said, and put down my glass. "He's just a columnist. Lay off, or you'll make the Governor jittery, too."

"I guess so," he said. "Okay."

Armed Services Today Begin Unification of Purchases

By Drew Pearson

(Copyright, 1952. By The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON — Today, at long last the Armed Services will start doing what they promised to do six years ago — pool their buying of supplies instead of competing against each other.

Only after hearings by Congressman Eddie Hebert of Louisiana, backed by Chairman Carl Vinson of Georgia and Congressman Jack Anderson of California, plus a lot of badgering by this columnist, have the Army, Navy and Air Force finally consented to do the common sense thing — buy in cooperation with each other, not as if the other branches were parts of the Red Army.

This was one of the big arguments put forward when the brass hats begged for unification. Millions of dollars, they argued, would be saved.

Instead, as revealed by this column last February, the Army bought six different types of carpenters' squares — one for the Signal Corps, Ordnance, Transportation, Chemical Warfare, Engineers, and Quartermaster, at prices ranging from 65 cents to $2.19.

Boots And Nails

The Air Force paid 12 cents a pound for 10-penny nails while the Navy paid six cents for exactly the same nails. . . . The Marines buy a combat boot for $16.80; the Navy buys exactly the same boot for $24.65. . . .The Air Force dress shoe costs $7.19; the Navy dress shoe costs $6.08. They are almost identical except for some stitching on the heel. The Air Force bought 1,700,000 dress shoes, thus could have saved $1,700,000 if it had bought the Navy shoe. . . .The Medical Services paid $21.75 each for blankets; The Air Force $14.15; the Navy $19.57.

The Armed Services also overorder, thus waste money on warehouse space. The Navy now has enough anchors to last 50 years, the Army enough of certain jeepparts to last 104 years. . . .The Army, Navy and Marine Corps insist on having their own rival coffee-roasting plants. . . .The Army and Navy operate separate medical supply systems, frequently buying the same scarce items in competition with each other. The Army has a medical supply base in Atlanta, Ga. Yet when the Navy base at Pensacola, Fla., nearby, wants medical supplies, it gets them not from Atlanta, but from a Navy depot at Edgewater, N.J. . . .Likewise, when the Army at Fort Dix, N. J., wants medical supplies, it gets them not from the Navy at Edgewater, N. J., but from Schenectady, N. Y.

Amazing fact is that after the Armed Forces put across unification, they privately forgot all about one of their main arguments for unification. And the civilian heads of the Defense Department did little to make the brass hats cooperate. Even when this column published an expose of overlapping buying last winter, it brought a series of Pentagon denials.

Inescapable fact is that the biggest expenditures in government are by the military. In contrast, civilian expenditures are almost infinitesimal. But today, the military has finally admitted its mistake and will begin at least one saving by adopting a unified purchase plan.

Time For A Change

Certain significant elections around the country already make it look as if U. S. voters really have decided it's "Time for a Change." Though the changes sometimes have gone against the Republicans, nevertheless the present temper of the American people is to end the political life of certain political phonies and hate-mongers. Here are some they have already kicked out:

Sen. Owen Brewster of Maine — after a quarter of a century of dominating the Republican Party in Maine, Brewster was ousted by Progressive Gov. Fred Payne. The people of Maine had got wise to the manner in which Brewster was working for Dictator Franco of Spain, Pan American Airways, and others.

Congressman John Rankin of Mississippi — this rootin'-tootin' hate disseminator was considered unbeatable in his district. He has spewed more intolerance than any other Congressman since Bilbo, was the man who first whispered that Eisenhower was a Jew because of a kidding reference in the West Point Year Book to Ike as a "Swedish Jew." Last month, the people of Mississippi finally ousted Rankin.

The Republican machine in Philadelphia — almost continually since the Civil War, the so-called City of Brotherly Love was ruled by a Republican machine. It was considered unbeatable. Last year, however, GOP corruption got so bad that the Democrats kicked the Republicans out. Philadelphia is now run by a new Democratic administration.

Sen. Kenneth McKellar — Down in Tennessee, doddering Senator McKellar, long considered unbeatable, had served in Congress for close to half a century. But despite the backing of the Crump machine, Tennessee voters have just kicked him out.

Senator McCarran's Nevada Machine — For years McCarran has dominated the State of Nevada. But last week, a 31-year-old exnewsman, Tom Mechling, relatively unknown in Nevada, defeated McCarran's law partner plus the full weight of the McCarran machine. This was purely a Democratic fight, but it was indicative of the American Public's desire for a change.

In Wisconsin today, there's another battle to end another false political god. State Senator Len Schmitt, a hard-fighting Republican, is challenging Senator McCarthy, who has the backing of the powerful Coleman machine, plus his old critic, Governor Kohler, who has now strangely made peace with McCarthy.

Under these circumstances it seems impossible for Schmitt to win. However, a big vote rolled up in this primary also may indicate that the people of Wisconsin likewise are ready for a change.

Texas Merry-Go-Round

Speaker Sam Rayburn is giving the cold shoulder to the Democratic Convention in Amarillo today. . . . Several Texas Congressmen have already declared for Eisenhower, including John E. Lyle of Corpus Christi and Lloyd Bentsen of McAllen. . . .Congressman Olin E. Teague, returning from Los Angeles, seems sympathetic to Ike, but remarked that the scant 12,000 who heard him at the coliseum didn't make his chances appear too bright. . . .Since then, Ikeites have been careful about his crowds. When they first proposed that Ike speak in Philadelphia one day before the Labor Day Week end, Pennsylvania's Governor Fine warned that few people would be around to hear him near a week end. That was why Ike's Philadelphia speech was shifted to September 4 — three days after Labor Day. . . . In San Antonio, Sheriff Owen Kilday, boss of that city, indicates he may support Eisenhower, but says he'll consult his two brothers first. One brother is the Congressman from San Antonio, the other is an assistant in the Justice Department, which Eisenhower is attacking as corruption-ridden.

Mickey Rooney Owes $32,761 In Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government said today that Movie Star Mickey Rooney owes it $32,761 in back income taxes and interest. It said Rooney should have paid the money on income received from a corporation—Rooney, Inc. for which the actor once worked.

Rooney denied owing any taxes. He petitioned the U. S. tax court to overrule the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

When you look at the price of a man's suit, you wonder why they still put pockets in the pants.

A delegation of 200 Mississippians, headed by Gov. Dennis Murphree of that state, on a goodwill tour of the west and south, arrived on a special train. A superintendent of schools with the party, being shown over the city, missed the train on its departure.

The World Today—

Sen. Taft Can Keep Calm

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Taft can afford to be calm about the kind of support he gives Gen. Eisenhower. He is one of those fortunate men who no longer has to be troubled by ambition.

He has abandoned hope for the one job he desired above all others: the presidency. It's unlikely Eisenhower, if the general wins, could offer Taft any other spot he likes as well as his present job in the Senate.

No other job would give him such a forum for his views and opinions, which he likes to express. And he has a following which shares his views.

His Senate job—he was elected in 1950 to a six-year term—is safe for another four years. He's 63 now.

The fact that the majority of the Republican party, as represented by delegates to the National Convention, turned him down in favor of Eisenhower doesn't necessarily mean the majority doesn't share his views.

It may have chosen the general because it thought he had a better chance of winning in November, although the party has turned Taft down three times now—in 1940, in 1948 and in 1952—for a crack at the presidency.

This does not seem to have made even a slight dent in his thinking. He has indicated in no way that he has changed. And he knows he represents the thinking of many Republicans who might have preferred him as a candidate.

For two weeks now at least there has been increasing talk—on an on-again and off-again basis—that he was going to confer with Eisenhower, who has apparently been anxious to have him campaign vigorously.

Several times, without committing himself to any promises of beating the bushes for the man who beat him in Chicago, Taft said he wants to talk with the general to learn his views and what he'd do if elected.

This hesitancy of Taft's leaves the door open for him to decline such a speaking tour if he doesn't hear from Eisenhower what he wants to hear.

If Taft stays out of it and Eisenhower wins, the general's supporters will, it seems sure, try to topple Taft from his present position of Republican leader in the Senate.

If Eisenhower makes commitments to Taft and then goes on to win, with Taft's help, Taft would be in a better position to keep his Senate leadership post.

If it takes three secret service men, at taxpayers' expense, to guard Margaret Truman safely through a tour of Europe, we can at least be thankful for one thing. That is that she isn't triplets and all going different places.

Hurricane Changes Course

Weathermen Expect Storm To Strike South Carolina

CHARLESTON, S. C., Aug. 30—(AP)—Hurricane Able, the first of the season, headed for the South Carolina coast tonight.

The Miami Weather Bureau's 8 p. m. (CST) advisory said the "small violent" hurricane will pass inland within the next few hours with the center between Charleston and Beaufort, about 70 miles southwest of here.

The latest advisory placed the hurricane center at 40 to 50 miles east of Savannah, Ga., still moving northward.

The hurricane has a small area of winds about 100 miles-an-hour near the center and hurricane force or above probably 75 miles in diameter.

Residents Ready

The coastal residents were ready for it.

As warnings were hoisted from North Georgia coast to Wilmington, N. C., residents and vacationers battened down every movable object in expectation of the big blow. Civil defense organizations and wings of the civil air patrol in Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina were alerted for duty. The South Carolina wing had 15 mobile units ready for the emergency.

Most early arrivals for the Labor Day week-end at beaches resorts refused to return home and prepared to weather the storm. Thousands of week-end tourists, warned of the approaching storm, stayed at home.

Homeowners along the several hundred miles of sandy beaches stretching northeastward from here moved possessions inland. The advisor warned of "dangerously high" tides tonight along the North Georgia and South Carolina coasts.

Military Men Stand-By

Big military installations along the coast at Paris Island, S. C., Camp Lejeune and Cherry Point, N. C., also took measures to safeguard life and property.

Historic Charleston suffered a hurricane in 1940 that cost property owners two million dollar's damages. Remembering 1940, city, military and naval officials began preparing for the storm yesterday.

Sedalia Misses Its Blood Quota

The Sedalia Red Cross blood unit missed its 300-pint quota by 22 at the last visit of the Bloodmobile last Wednesday and Thursday.

The Kansas City unit sets up a 150-pint daily minimum. Although this will not interrupt the local program, the deficit must be made up in the future visits if Sedalia is to make its yearly quota.

Last week's visit was the first of the next fiscal year; the local unit was one of four counties to make its quota during the period which ended June 30.

The local Red Cross chapter wishes to thank not only the regular donors, but those who gave blood without appointments. There were 42 volunteers Thursday and 23 Wednesday.

In addition to those who gave blood, there were many Sedalians, unable to donate, whose civic spirit is appreciated by the Red Cross. Those who helped in other ways were a woman who sent a cake to the nurses, and a filling station operator and a man's club who provided electric fans for the donating station.

Guards Return From Minnesota

After two weeks of field training and summer camp, members of the "C" Battery of the 128th and the 35th Headquarters Division from Sedalia returned home Saturday from Camp Ripley, Minn.

Both units attended the camp as a part of the 35th Division, which is comprised of National Guard units from Missouri and Kansas.

The units arrived in Sedalia about 8 a. m. Saturday with the exception of a rear detachment, which is expected to arrive sometime Monday morning.

Most of the officers with the units have also arrived, but some will return to Sedalia the first of the week.

The trip to and from Camp Ripley was made by bus.

Milo, Mo. Woman Dies In Wreck Near Nevada

NEVADA, Mo. (AP) — Mrs. Liza Robb of near Milo, Mo., was killed instantly in a truck-auto accident shortly before noon on U. S. Highway 71, 2½ miles north of Milo.

Her brother, S. B. McKethen, with whom she was riding, was injured. He is in a hospital here. The extent of his injuries was not known immediately.

The Highway Patrol said the McKethen car was struck from the rear by a trailer-transport driven by Richard Reschke, 17, Falls City, Neb. Reschke said the McKethen car slowed unexpectedly and he was unable to avoid the collision. The car was hurtled from the highway, across a ditch, through a fence, and it landed on its top in a field.

Reschke did not appear to be hurt. The front of the truck was damaged.

Chimpanzees Welcome Television Cameramen

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 30—(AP)—A New York television crew got an affectionate welcome today from the actors—the chimpanzees.

Pancho and Roy greeted the three-man crew by climbing all over the men, bestowing chimpanzee hugs, peering through view-finders on the cameras and inspecting other equipment.

The crew will make films of the animal's antics each day for use on a weekly nationwide Dumont television show.

Death Toll Grows As US Opens Holiday

(By The Associated Press)

The accidental death toll mounted slowly Saturday as millions went on Labor Day week-end trips to celebrate summer's last holiday.

At least 100 deaths were reported in the period from 5 p.m. (CST) Friday to 8 p. m. (CST) Saturday. Traffic accidents accounted for 82.

There were four drownings and 14 fatalities due to miscellaneous mishaps.

The National Safety Council predicted that the death count from traffic accidents would reach 480 for the 79-hour period from 6 p. m. local time Friday to midnight Monday.

The council had estimated that 40 million automobiles would be in operation during the week-end. But a hurricane threat and widespread rain in the southeastern states probably reduced this number considerably.

Last year a survey showed that there were a record 658 deaths from all accidents during the Labor Day week-end, including the highest traffic toll ever recorded for the holiday—461. There were 97 drownings and 100 miscellaneous accident deaths recorded for the 1951 Labor Day week-end.

The deaths by states today, traffic, drowning, miscellaneous included Illinois 4-0-1, Kansas 2-0-0, and Missouri 3-0-0.

Cancer Battler To Talk Monday To Optimists

J. W. Ficklin, district chairman of the Cancer Crusade and prominent civic leader and businessman of Columbia, will be the speaker at the Optimist Club Tuesday at the Bothwell Hotel.

Ficklin has announced that there is being prepared for release Tuesday figures from the Division of Public Health regarding cancer deaths in Missouri by counties and the number of people being treated. Ficklin will talk on cancer at the meeting. His talk is a part of the American Cancer Society's educational program in an attempt to have every organization within the state push an annual program against the No. 2 killer of mankind, cancer.

The Rev. J. W. Watts, secretary of the Optimist Club and Pettis County campaign chairman of the American Cancer Society, arranged to have Mr. Ficklin as speaker.

Eisenhower Will Address GOP Women's Club In St. Louis

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 (AP)—The National Federation of Women's Republican Clubs announced tonight Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will address the group's biennial convention in St. Louis on Saturday, Sept. 20.

The announcement was made by Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington, president of the clubs.

Superforts Again Hit Pyongyang

Bombers Follow-Up Friday Night Raid; Five MIGs Downed

SEOUL, Sunday, Aug. 31—(AP)—B-29 Superforts roared over the battered North Korean capital of Pyongyang last night and dropped tons of high explosives on a 100-acre supply area in the southwest section of the city.

The raid came only hours after a series of jet battles deep in northwest Korea in which American, British and Canadian pilots shot down at least five Russian-built MIGs and damaged 11. One damaged Red warplane was listed as probably destroyed.

The attack by 11 Superforts last night was a follow-up to Friday's hammering raids when Allied fighter-bombers flew more than 1,400 sorties over the capital.

The target area contained about 750 single-story buildings used by the Communists to store military supplies.

No Communist warplanes challenged the big bombers and only moderate anti-aircraft fire was reported. Because of the heavy layers of clouds over the city, the B-29s used electronic aiming techniques to drop their bomb loads.

Were Civilians Warned?

An official spokesman for the Far East Air Forces in Tokyo said he did not think civilians in Pyongyang had been warned the raid was coming.

We feel they have been warned sufficiently," Brig. Gen. William P. Nuckols said. "They know how they are living in a danger area."

Pyongyang Radio returned to the air Sunday morning after two days of silence. It made no mention of the Superfort raid but admitted Friday's day - long attacks destroyed or damaged more than 500 buildings and caused 200 casualties.

The Red broadcast as usual said most of the casualties were children and old people and most of the damage was to farm crops around the city.

The Reds, apparently stung by Friday's raid on Pyongyang, sent 100 MIGs roaring out of their Manchurian sanctuary to do battle with U. N. Sabrejets yesterday.

The U. S. Fifth Air Force said 79 Sabre pilots fought 19 separate battles with the larger MIG forces over Northwest Korea.

Sabres Enjoy Good Month

The new score gave sharpshooting pilots of the swift Sabres one of their best months of the war. Their August tally with one day to go, stands at 32 MIGs destroyed, three probably destroyed and 43 damaged.

They shot down one MIG Friday and damaged two.

The Air Force said the Red jets shot down only one Sabre in August air battles prior to Saturday. Allied losses Saturday, if any, will be listed later in a weekly summary.

Some of the Sabres in Saturday's roaring battles were piloted by British and Canadian fliers. A British and a Canadian pilot each scored a damage claim.

Capt. Clifford Jolley of Salt Lake City, one of the two U. S. jet aces still in Korea, got one damage claim Saturday.

Moberly Girl Is Killed When Car Hits Bicycle

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. George Henry Shockey.

Congress Uncovers Mistakes In Veterans Housing Program

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30—(AP)—A congressional committee today charged widespread irregularities, including bribery and favoritism, in administration of the huge veterans housing program.

The charge was made in a report by a House select committee which investigated educational training and loan guaranty programs under the GI Bill. The group is headed by Rep. Teague (D-Tex.)

The committee said irregularities turned up by the Veterans Administration's own inspection and investigation service included:

"Acceptance of gifts and gratuities on a widespread basis.

"Acceptance of bribes and participation in conspiracies by some loan guaranty officials.

"Purchase of homes by some loan guaranty officials under questionable circumstances.

"Favoritism to certain fee appraisers and fee compliance inspectors in some offices.

"Favoritism to certain builders by expediting handling of their cases, granting unjustified price increases, and authorizing deviations and substitutions favoring the builder.

"Interests in outside activity such as real estate sales, construction and lending companies, when such as real estate sales, construction and lending companies, when such activities tended to conflict with the interest of the government."

List Of Presents

The report said one appraiser at Detroit acknowledged that his Christmas presents from persons doing business with the loan guaranty division included five bottles of whisky, a basket of fruit, a chafing dish filled with fruits and nuts, a punch bowl filled with Christmas goodies, four turkeys, two hams, a carving set, a bottle of wine, a fruit cake, some linens, and gift certificates totaling $95.

The committee recommended that the loan guaranty officer of the regional VA office in Washington, D. C., be removed and the loan guaranty division be reorganized immediately.

The official was identified as Morgan B. Callahan by Oliver E. Meadows, the committee's staff director. Callahan could not be reached for comment today.

The committee made a number of recommendations. These included:

Giving the Veterans Administration legal authority to supervise the contractural relationship between the veteran purchaser and the seller.

Guarantees Run One Year

Allowing VA to require that sales contracts give a full year's guarantee on heating, plumbing and electrical fixtures, a dry basement, a sound roof, and a satisfactory spectic tank, if one is required.

Adequate civil service ratings and pay to attract competent professional employes to VA.

Furnishing each veteran borrower a booklet explaining the operation of the loan guaranty program and describing the responsibility of the veteran, the builder and the seller.

A specific prohibition against acceptance of gifts and gratuities by VA employes from persons doing business with VA; also limitations on their own outside business activities.

Death Stalked Bunker Hill, Only 4 Miles From Truce Site

By Sam Summerlin

EDITORS: This is the story of Bunker Hill, told by an Associated Press correspondent who was there when the fighting was at its worst.

SEOUL, Sunday, Aug. 31—(AP)—War and peace merge in weird and tragic fashion in the battle of Bunker Hill.

Generals and admirals toil in the armistice talks at Panmunjom, only four miles to the west of Bunker Hill.

U. S. Marines captured and kept Bunker Hill in a battle that some leatherneck veterans called as hot as any action they saw on Iwo Jima and Tarawa.

By day, the Marines fought in view of the silvery balloons that hover over Panmunjom to mark that tiny perimeter of peace.

By night, the camouflaged warriors watched a searchlight cast its nervous beam into the dark sky over the neutral zone.

Bunker Hill is a symbol of the brand of warfare that prevails today—and that likely will continue until the Panmunjom talks succeed or fail.

On the broad canvas of war, Bunker Hill cuts a small figure. The fighting was confined to one area and the Marines committed only one company—roughly 250 men—at a time in the fighting.

The enemy's casualties were nearly 4,000—less than half the killed and wounded suffered by the North Korean forces in the month-long "Heartbreak Ridge" campaign.

Battle Ranks With Worst

But for sheer ferocity, the battle of Bunker Hill ranks high with the Marines.

Lt. Col. Gerard T. Armitage of Evanston, Ill., commander of the battalion that did most of the Bunker fighting, said Marine veterans of Iwo Jima and Tarawa told him: "This is the hottest combat we've ever experienced."

The Leathernecks endured savage enemy artillery and mortar fire, 108 degree heat and torrential rains. When Chinese soldiers surged into Marine trenches, they fought with fists and knives.

The Allied defenders live less than 50 yards from the Chinese. A young, wounded infantryman told me: "We can hear those goonies jabbering in their bunkers."

Bunker Hill lies under the nose of commanding Chinese positions. As one Marine put it: "Every time you open your mouth, they can put a bullet in it."

The Allied defenders are entrenched on the southern slopes. The enemy has all trails leading off the hill zeroed in, so movement is only at night. One wounded soldier said he was hit at 8 o'clock in the morning but had to wait until nightfall before he could be taken off the hill.

Why is Bunker Hill important? Maj. Gen. John T. Selden, boss of the First Marine Division, explained: "On that hill, we can look right into their the Communists positions."

The Marines had to stop what they called the "creeping" Chinese offensive, said Lt. Col. Spencer H. Pratt of Cleveland Heights, Ohio. He works in the Marine Division's G-3 operations section that masterminds Marine maneuvers.

The Marines seized Bunker Hill in a bold, surprise maneuver the night of Aug. 11-12. The conquest was easy.

"But the Communist reaction to our move was strong and positive," said Pratt.

The Chinese made vicious and rare daylight assaults on Bunker Hill the afternoon of Aug. 12. For five days and nights, the Marines held their ground through seven nightmarish attacks.

On Aug. 16, the Chinese called it quits. But angry probes since that date show the enemy is still vitally interested in the battle-scarred terrain.

Armitage called the struggle "the most fanatical fighting I've ever seen." He said the Marines threw up a "solid wall of steel" with artillery and mortar shells, rifle and machine gun bullets, tank fire, rockets and hand grenades.

Chinese Kept Coming

"Usually," Armitage said, "you can fire the whole works like that for three to five minutes and stop any attack. But we fired four hours and 10 minute without stopping and the Chinese still kept coming."

The colonel said 200 to 300 Chinese bodies were sprawled in the dust after the first counterattack. "Some kids had to push bodies off their holes to get out."

Armitage said the Chinese artillery and mortar fire was furious. In one attack 10,000 to 15,000 rounds dropped in a spot 1,000 yards square.

Doctors stayed awake for 48-hour stretches and longer to tend the wounded. By the trainload, casualties were moved south to clear tent hospitals for more wounded brought from the combat zone by helicopter and ambulance.

Day and night, the Marines had to stay alert. The sun beat down and glared off the white sand. Armitage said "quite a few got dehydrated. Heat prostration hit them and they were out like a light."

One Marine remarked:

"You got so hot and tense you couldn't eat. I mostly lived on cocoa."

One Marine said he fired all night and never saw a single Chinese soldier. At dawn, he was amazed to find 15 bodies lying in front of his gun.

Bunker Hill was the first big battle test for the new Marine armored vests and every Leatherneck now swears by his protector. Many can recite stories of how they or their buddies were saved when the vest took the blow of a bullet or piece of shrapnel.

Today, the battle of Bunker Hill goes on, but quietly. It may flame anew.

"The Chinese are trying to find out our intentions," said a division officer. The answer is:

"We intend to stay."

Jet Ace Dies In Air Crash At Detroit

DETROIT, Aug. 30—(AP)—An Air Force F-89 Scorpion tore itself apart above 51,000 spectators and carried its pilot, a Korean jet ace, and his radar observer to their deaths at the International Aviation Exposition here today.

Four spectators were hurt, none seriously, although at first one was believed to have been killed. Five cars were wrecked or damaged by falling debris. Several spectators had narrow, almost miraculous escapes.

Killed were Maj. Donald Adams, 31, of Mt. Clemens, Mich., the pilot, and Capt. Ed Kelly, 34, of New York City, the radar observer in the all-weather jet fighter.

Adams, father of three, returned home only June 16 from Korea where he bagged 6½ Communist MIGs and became the nation's 13th jet fighter ace. Both he and Kelly were members of the 61st Fighter Squadron stationed at Griffis Air Force Base, Rome, N. Y.

Wing Flies Off Plane

As Adams and Kelly came screaming over the field at 200 feet with another F-89 for a demonstration of high-speed climbing, a wing flew off their plane. It spun crazily upward. The plane's tail flew off and the remainder, carrying the doomed men, splattered into an ammunition storage shed and exploded.

Exploding small-arms bullets from the storage supply of the Michigan National Guard endangered spectators who flocked to the scene.

The second Scorpion, carrying Maj. John Recher, 31, of Miamisburg, O., and Capt. Thomas Myslicki, 29, of Minneapolis, landed safely and undamaged.

Among the awe-struck spectators who saw the spectacular accident were Air Force Secretary Finletter and Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff. Both rushed to the crash scene, ignoring the exploding bullets as they attempted to aid in futile rescue attempt.

Vandenberg said the accident probably was caused by the force of updrafts and downdrafts encountered in pulling up in a sharp climb with afterburners adding scores of horsepower to the plane's jet power plant.

Afterburners convert exhaust gases into additional energy, and are used to add speed and climb.

Some Say Adlai, Ike Re-Enact Old Fable

Soldiers Hear Peace Outlook By Stevenson

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 30—Gov. Adlai Stevenson has told America's armed forces, in a message broadcast overseas, that he does not believe a third World War is inevitable, "but neither is peace inevitable."

The text of his statement was released in Springfield today.

An aide said the Department of Defense requested Stevenson, the presidency, and his Republican opponent, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, to prepare a message for the men and women in service overseas.

The armed forces radio began broadcasting the transcribed statements during the week, the aide said.

Stevenson, describing himself as an optimist, said: "I want to make one thing very definite: I don't expect a third World War and I reject the notion that a third World War is inevitable.

"And if war is not inevitable, neither is peace inevitable."

He Rips GOP Bloc

He condemned one bloc of Republicans for what he called the "little America" concept, the theory of the United States confining its policies and actions to its immediate area.

And, turning to the domestic scene, he told the fighting forces:

"So long as you are asked to do the unusual, so long must we put aside politics as usual, profits as usual, strikes as usual, and pleasure as usual."

That, he said is the basic message he plans to carry into the presidential election campaign. He said he was not sure it is good politics: "I don't know yet whether one can win an election with hard distasteful truths, but this is the only way I want to win it."

The governor struck out sharply at people who ask whether time is working for or against the United States.

"It seems to me a silly question," he said. "Time works for the fellow who makes best use of his time. America can make better use of time than our adversaries."

To the persons who claim the United States has gained nothing in the last year of the Korean War, Stevenson said: "I sometimes wonder how short-sighted some people can get, especially in a campaign year. We have gained a year's time and we have used that year to accomplish three significant victories."

List Of Victories

The three victories, he said were:

1. "We have enormously expanded our defense production. I will not say we have yet won the battle of production, but we are well on our way to winning it." That progress, he said, has upset the Kremlin's calculations.

2. The strength of America's allies has grown in South Korea, Indochina, and Western and Southern Europe. "There are no more easy pickings in the Far East or in Europe and the Kremlin likes to gamble only on sure things."

3. "We have done what many doubters of Democracy though a Democracy could not do. We have yielded neither to the hotheads who wanted to extend the war nor the weak-kneed who wanted to quit when the going got tough."

The Weather

Missouri — Considerable cloudiness Sunday and Sunday night with scattered showers; partly cloudy Monday; turning cooler northwest Sunday, cooler north and west central Sunday night and Monday; highs Sunday 75-80 extreme northwest to 80s elsewhere.

"BUMPY" IS ALL SHE HAS LEFT — Eight-year-old Betty Worthington whose cocker spaniel, "Paddy," was run over and killed at Freehold, N. J., by a speeding car in Gov. Adlai Stevenson's motorcade, clutches "Bumpy," another cocker and the only pet she has left. The Democratic presidential nominee was enroute to a political rally in Neptune, N. J., when the dog was killed. He said he was "exceedingly concerned" about the accident and hoped to make amends. (AP Wirephoto).

Ike Offers Labor Unions A Square Deal

NEW YORK, Aug. 30—(AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower offered to America's workers today a Labor Day pledge of fairness, friendship and no coercion.

But even as the Republican presidential nominee was making overtures to labor, he became snarled in something of a dispute with a trio of New Jersey CIO leaders.

They said the general had told them he never had heard of "union security" and didn't know the difference between the open, union and closed shop.

"Not so," an Eisenhower aide came back.

Joel R. Jacobson and Hugh Caldwell of the Essex-West Hudson CIO Council and Fred Ascough, United Auto Workers international representative, said in a statement in Newark that when they had called on Eisenhower in New York Thursday they found he "didn't know the answer to a simple question which any students of high school economics could answer."

Newlin Explains

The Eisenhower aide, Stewart Newlin, said he sat in on the general's meeting with the CIO trio and other New Jersey labor leaders and Eisenhower had stipulated that there could be only a general discussion of labor-management relations because his time was limited.

So, he said, Eisenhower turned aside as too technical for discussion at the time questions such as those regarding open, union and closed shops.

Eisenhower dropped in on an old friend, financier Bernard M. Baruch—who played host yesterday morning at breakfast to Democratic presidential nominee Adlai Stevenson.

Baruch didn't pose for pictures with Stevenson—but he did with Eisenhower.

Sparkman Denies Trumanites Wait For Move By Russians

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 30 (AP)—Sen. John J. Sparkman denied tonight that the administration's "containment" policy is aimed merely at checkmating the Russians or waiting for them to show their hand.

Hitting back at Republican criticism of the Truman administration's foreign policies, the Democratic vice - presidential nominee declared:

"As a matter of fact, 'Containment' has a wider, more creative, more dynamic purpose. It stands for a halt to Communist aggression, wherever that appears. But even more tellingly, it stands for the restoration of the strength of the free world as a warning to would-be aggressors."

The Alabama senator aired his views in a speech prepared for delivery at the national convention of the American Veterans of World War II (Amvets).

He Cites Marshall Plan

Sparkman cited the Marshall Plan, the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance, the various mutual defense pacts, the Point Four program and other projects as steps taken by the administration to block the spread of Soviet aggression.

"We are sharing our abundance with other countries to make them whole and strong," he said. "And we are doing all this not merely out of idealism but out of enlighted self-interest as well."

Touching on the Truman administration's post-war attitude toward Russia, Sparkman declared that "present recriminations among ourselves as to why we did not act differently are useless."

"The gist of America's policy can be accurately taken as its response when the renewed imperialism of the Soviets became manifest," he said.

Korea Move Drew Applause

Sparkman went on to say President Truman was "universally applauded" when he used American troops to combat the Communist invasion of South Korea.

"Since then, because the struggle has been long-drawn-out, and because armistice negotiations have dragged on, there is a disposition in some quarters to make partisan use of the Korean issue," he said, adding:

"Yet our act of leadership in Korea was essential to containing Soviet imperialism. It upset the Soviet timetable, kept Southeast Asia from being inundated by the Communists, and dispilled the spirit of hopelessness which had taken root in Western Europe.

"These are postive gains which have helped stabilize conditions in both Asia and Europe."

Setup Recalls Tale Of Hare And Tortoise

NEW YORK, Aug. 30—(AP)—Are Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois re-enacting the old tale of the tortoise and the hare?

Will Stevenson's flying pace at the start of the presidential race slacken and will Eisenhower pass him at the wire in November?

These questions are worrying both political camps. The next month of campaigning may begin to furnish the answer.

At the traditional Labor Day breakaway for intensive traveling by the candidates, most politicians think Stevenson has made much more progress than Eisenhower.

It is something of a handicap contest in which the Illinois governor had to start far back of Eisenhower because he isn't so well known to the general public outside of his home state. But as the Democratic nominee he has behind him a party accustomed to winning national elections and pretty well steeped in political know-how.

Eisenhower has told vistors he deliberately has slowed the pace of his camaign to conserve his ammunition until the battle gets heated.

Outcome Takes Shape Late

Most observers are inclined to think that the outcome of any presidential election begins to take form early in October. President Truman's 1948 victory, which seemingly was manufactured in the last two weeks before election day, was the exception.

Eisenhower's associates say that the August headlines aren't worth anything in November. The general himself has been quoted as telling some visitors he wants to keep himself physically fresh for the last gruelling weeks.

At 61, he may need more hours away from the grind than the younger Stevenson. At 52, Stevenson gives every sign of being able to go at top speed until November, despite a recent kidney operation. He says he expects to be elected in November "running like a singed cat."

Neither campaign is very effectively organized as yet. Neither, for instance, has the sure-footed stride and split-minute timing that marked Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's effort in 1948. But the relative political amateurs may win where Dewey was denied a victory.

A simple question can get you an argument in the Eisenhower camp.

This reporter asked one of the top men in that group "who's running this campaign?" The answer was "Adams"—Governor Sherman Adams of New Hampshire.

On the other hand, only a day or so before Arthur Summerfield, the Republican national chairman, had assured me that he was the top manager of the campaign.

That illustrates the confusion in the Republican camp. The indications are strong that Eisenhower himself has taken over the direction of his campaign—that he is beginning by now to believe that even his short indoctrination in practical politics since last April has put him in the position to make the mechanical as well as the policy decisions for his race.

Hagerty Only Pro

In the Eisenhower camp, the only pro who shows on the surface is James A. Hagerty, administrative assistant borrowed from Dewey.

Hagerty runs the arrangements, takes care of the press, radio, television and photographers with a sure hand. It is easy to suppose that he also shares in some—but possibly not enough—policy decisions.

Outside of Hagerty, the Eisenhower entourage is strictly from the state level. It numbers professional politicians who for the most part have demonstrated their ability to win in their own states but obviously know little about a nation - wide campaign.

In the Democratic camp, Stevenson is depending on relatively untried amateurs. Wilson Wyatt, his campaign manager, has been around the Washington scene but he has to make up in enthusiasm what he lacks in national campaign experience.

Despite President Truman's obvious belief that the "give-'em-hell" technique is the way for a Democrat to win, Stevenson thus far is having nothing of it.

The Illinois governor, from all the signs, is running his own campaign and in his own way. He deals in subtlies scarcely recognized and hardly appreciated at the White House. He probably will continue to do so.

The pace of Stevenson's progress this early in the campaign has been geared to his canny ability to make words talk to the particular crowd that hears him.

Papers To Observe Labor Day Holiday

In observance of Labor Day, the Democrat will not be published on Monday, Sept. 1, and there will be no publication of the Capital on Tuesday morning, Sept. 2.

Recollections of Dr. John Trader From Civil War Given Into History

DR. TRADER'S CHILDREN, all in one photo taken a few years ago: Left to right are: Mrs. C. E. Fletcher, Sedalia; Dr. C. B. Trader, Sedalia; Arthur M. Trader and John Trader Jr., now deceased; George H. Trader, Sedalia; Mrs. O. J. Schien, Sedalia; R. F. Trader, Kansas City; and Emmett E. Trader, Corpus Christi, Tex.

Father of Sedalians Wrote Corrections On Margins of Book

John W. Trader, the son of the Rev. Moses Trader, came with his family from Xenia, Ohio, to north Missouri in 1840 when he was three years of age. He graduated from the Missouri Medical College in the spring of 1860 and began service with voluntary Union groups, later (1863) becoming a brigade surgeon in the First cavalry Regiment, Missouri State Militia, during the Civil War.

Dr. Trader was twice married. His first wife, Miss Lucy A. W. Wyatt, of Kentucky, died during the war, leaving no children. His second wife, Miss Tillie E. Batterton, of Danville, Kentucky, was a sister to the wife of acting Brigadier General John F. Philips, with whose brigade Dr. Trader served in the battles of Westport and Mine Creek. Seven children were born to this marriage. At this writing two sons and two daughters, Mrs. C. E. Fletcher, Mrs. O. J. Schien, Dr. C. B. Trader and George H. Trader, are living in Sedalia, Emmett E. Trader lives in Corpus Christi, Tex., and R. F. Trader makes his home in Kansas City. Arthur M. Trader and John Trader Jr., are deceased.

Dr. Trader resigned from military service in May, 1865, and visited Europe in the interest of his profession. From 1867 until his death in 1907, Dr. Trader practiced his profession in Sedalia. During the years 1876-1877 he was president of the Missouri State Medical Association.

Thirty years after the Civil War he wrote an account of his experiences in that conflict on the page margins of several volumes of one of his histories — Battles and Leaders of the Civil War (New York: Century Co., 1887), Vols. I and IV. These books were given to the editor by the doctor's daughter, Mrs. Christopher Fletcher, and have now been given to the State Historical Society of Missouri. The narrative is reproduced below in the doctor's own words with the exception of the material in brackets which was supplied by the editor.

Dr. John W. Trader, Civil War surgeon, and subject of the historical article presented herewith.

The accompanying story about Dr. John W. Trader is from the current issue of the Missouri Historical Review and was written by Dr. Frederick A. Culmer, a native of England and a professor of history at Central College, Fayette. He adds the writing is actually that of Dr. Trader. Culmer's additions being in brackets.

THE RECOLLECTIONS

The events of 1860-65 (so Doctor Trader of Sedalia, Missouri, begins his story) will always remain a pleasant memory to those who stood by the "Old Flag" in those trying times. In 1859-60 I was a student in the Missouri Medical College. The excitement caused by the John Brown raid (Oct. 16, 1859) had raised the disunion sentiment in St. Louis to fever heat. Brown had been hung in effigy on the street, and the slave element was overawing everything. Dr. Joseph M. McDowell, dean of the college, commenced to organize an artillery company. Students were urged to join. The disposition to please, especially among those expecting to graduate, soon filled the company to the maximum. The day was set for mustering, and the cannon arrived from Jefferson City. They were at the railroad station.

Before the arrival of the mustering officer, the graduating class had passed their examinations and were awaiting their diplomas. The day after commencement we were requested to meet at the college to exchange diplomas where the wrong ones had been given to some. We found the mustering officer in attendance. We were instructed that when our names were called we could step a few paces to the rear if we did not wish to be mustered. With several others, I backed out. This company was among those captured at Camp Jackson.

In the spring of 1861 our sheriff received orders to enroll the militia in our county (Putnam). Quite a large number refused and set about the organization of the Union men. We simply drew up a form explaining our design and signed it. Major Dixon, (Dickson?) a man of seventy years, but full of fire and patriotism, was our captain. After our numbers reached 120, it was thought best to make two companies, and late in the summer of 1861, I was chosen captain of one. We elected for first sergeant a soldier of the Mexican War who had some knowledge of drill. . . He assisted me in getting the men into line. I was fortunate in getting a copy of . . . Tactics, which I faithfully studied. We drilled every week. Some had to ride fifteen or twenty miles each week, but we rarely had to report absentees.

Before the organization of the second company we were ordered to repel an invasion from N. W. Missouri. We assembled about four miles from Unionville, Putnam County, Missouri, under the command of Major Dixon, proceeded to the town and placed the flag on the courthouse. We were called out several times and kept up our drills until the cold weather set in. In the spring we decided to join the volunteer forces, but we had a dividing point. General (Benjamin M.) Prentiss, hearing of our company, sent a couple of soldiers from his headquarters at Palmyra, to find out our intentions. They advised us to join the volunteers gathering along the Hannibal Railroad.

Early in March, 1862, we started for Laclede, Linn County, some 75 miles south of us. The ice was breaking up and the streams were full. We hastened on, swimming the streams with our horses. The weather was so cold that our clothes froze soon after coming out of the water. We never halted or unsaddled until we reached our destination, tired, hungry, and nearly frozen. Leaving at break of day we arrived about ten o'clock at night. We were assigned to the 1st Battalion, 1st Regiment, Missouri Cavalry Militia, and had clothing, rations, horse and camp equipage issued the next day.

Everything put on the martial air, and the bugle calls soon brought us into the realities of camp life. I was requested by Lieutenant Colonel Alex M. Woolfolk to act as surgeon for the battalion during its formative period. The men of my acquaintance requested that I be appointed the regular Assistant Surgeon of the regiment. I was notified that I must be examined as to my qualifications. I went to St. Louis, passed the examination, and was duly mustered in the 1st Regiment Cavalry, M. S. M., and assigned to Colonel Woolfolk's battalion.

After getting the hospital established at Laciede, I was ordered to accompany a detachment to operate with General (John H.) McNeil in North Missouri. We went to a small town called Shelbina, where we struck the trail of Colonel (Joseph C.) Porter's forces. We followed that night to Paris. Porter surrounded the town and kept us housed all day. Late in the afternoon his pickets were withdrawn and we set out following the trail. When they crossed a bottom prairie, they made a trail some 100 feet wide, and broke the sod as if it had been ploughed. We numbered about 400, with 2 pieces of artillery — 2 lb. Mt. Howitzers. The supposition was that Porter had 2 to 3 thousand. We scrimmaged with him at Newark next day. He captured our outpost, killing 2 or 3, and wounding 8 or 10. About this time (Brigadier General Lewis) Merrill's Horse joined us with some 1200 men and 2 pieces of brass, 12 lbs., rifled.

At Kirksville we overhauled him and fought a desperate battle, from ten a.m. until sunset. (August 6, 1862). Our loss was some 15 or 20 killed and near 100 wounded. Among those wounded was General McNeil. The rebel loss was 300 killed and 1500 wounded. The captain who had charge of the burying party told me that he had buried over 200 in one ditch. I visited two of the churches and their wounded filled the body of the church, with all the pews taken out; they were lying on the floor on straw as thick as sardines in a box. We followed up next day and picked up many stragglers and 2 wagon loads of small arms, some as fine double shotguns of English make as I ever saw. I left the command at Macon City and returned to Laclede with my wounded.

August and September, 1862. — General McNeil gave me quite a compliment for services on the field. From here (Laclede) our regiment, the 1st M. S. M., was ordered to reinforce the post at Lexington, Mo., September 1862. I went from the H. and St. Joe Railroad by way of Richmond, and by stage. I assisted in the surgical ward under the surgeon, Major C. Osborn. My first surgery was done at this (Lexington) hospital. I amputated the finger of a guard who accidentally shot himself. All went out upon outpost duty, and covered Price's forces, who fought the Lone Jack battle under (Colonel Varel) Cockrell and (Colonel Jo) Shelby, (August 16, 1862) as far as Holden, Johnson County. Our battalion was under the command of Lt. Colonel Woolfolk. During this expedition I led a charge on some stragglers, contrary to the order of the captain, and would have been court-martialed had it not been for the colonel and Major (Alex W.) Mullins, who did not think such severe treatment due me. Some of our officers were averse to fighting and getting hurt; I took it upon myself to lead the charge. The captain who wanted me arrested was of this class.

From Lexington we went to Sedalia, November 1862, and about March or April (1863), to Harrisonville, Cass County; from there to Germantown, and back to Harrisonville. Then to Lexington, then to Marshall. Fought Shelby at this point. I was Asst. Surgeon, 1st M. S. M. Cav., during this engagement (October 13, 1863). On the night before the battle we were attacked by General Shelby about sundown. The second shot from Shelby's gun amputated both legs of one of our gunners. Colonel (Bazel F.) Lazear immediately mounted the cavalry and tried to form a battle line, but the darkness and rain and thick brush delayed any formation that night. I was so worn out I buttoned my overcoat about me and lay down in a fence corner in the pelting rain and was soon asleep. Colonel Lazear, coming along in the darkness, ran square up against my horse. As the bridle rein was over my arm, the movement woke me. The Colonel was using some very emphatic language. He yelled out, "Get up and mount! What are you doing here?!" I told him who I was and he very kindly apologized. He told me he had been ordered to form his cavalry, but that he found it to be nearly impossible. It would be daylight before he could get them straightened out. (He thought) I would better go to the rear to a house where General (Egbert B.) Brown was, and try to get some rest. I hastily obeyed this very agreeable order and was soon in bed and asleep.

The Medical Director was getting his first experience in actual field service. He kept waking me up to tell me he believed we would have a battle, and I had better get up. I managed to hold the fort and at day (October 13, 1863) I got up and went out to my horse.

I mounted, expecting to join my own battalion, but the Medical Director had me remain with the General. I followed the section of artillery commanded by Major (Henry S.) Suess, into Marshall, to find that Col. Lazear had routed the enemy, capturing his gun, an old smooth bore that was with General (Zachary) Taylor in Mexico.

Lieutenant Colonel Lazear, 1st M. S. M. Cav., with a battalion of the 1st., and Major William Gentry, with a battalion of Home Guards, fought this battle to a finish. General Brown, with 7th and 4th M. S. M. Cav., shelled the rear of Shelby. They procured a guide and crossed Salt River some two miles below the bridge at Marshall, and came in on the right and rear of Col. Lazear. The rebels now gave way and divided their forces, (Colonel) Gordon and (Colonel) Coffee recrossed the Salt River bridge and retreated on the line of our march. Major Suess of the 7th., with two 2 lbs. Howitzers, passed over the bridge towards Marshall; the timber and uneven ground hit us from view. The Major had no support. I rode over with him. We stood perfectly still on our horses until the heavy firing ceased in front, and then made our way into the town. I then joined my regiment and followed the retreating foe to the Harrison County line. I was (afterwards) kept busy traversing the state doing police duty until Price's raid of (September-October) 1864.

How little of the campaigning and history of the armies of the West has ever been written! While not lacking in heroic men and heroic deeds, the soldiers of the West were notoriously lacking in that necessary adjunct in every army and squadron of the East, namely "The Army Correspondent!"

In this campaign (to repel General Sterling Price in 1864) I was ordered, after leaving Jefferson City, to join my regiment near Lexington, Missouri. I was with the troops of General (Alfred) Pleasanton, and without any supplies, as all my medical stores had been captured by General John B. Clark while in transit from Lexington to Jefferson City. General (John B.) Sanborn, (John) McNeil, and (Clinton B.) Fisk were with General Pleasanton.

We shipped our horses and equipage from Jefferson City by Mo. Pac. Ry., to the Lamine, where we disembarked on account of the burning of the railroad bridge. We were all mounted by daylight and on the west side of the Lamine we soon came up with the infantry of General A. J. Smith. The General invited us to breakfast. As we had no rations and no prospect of any until much later, we gladly accepted the hospitality. After breakfast we hurried on and about noon of the next day I reported to my regiment.

Soon after I was ordered to report to headquarters as Brigadier Surgeon. I began immediately the organization of the hospital. I knew from indications that hard work was before us. At Independence we first encountered the enemy, (October 22, 1864). My brigade was ordered forward and order given for attack. A battalion of the 7th and 4th was dismounted under Lieutenant Colonel (Thomas T.) Crittenden of the 7th M. S. M. Just as they dismounted Lieutenant Mullins of the 1st M. S. M. was shot through the abdomen, about 30 steps from where I was sitting with the General and Staff. I dismounted to go to my friend. The leaden hail was so thick I had to squat as I ran, to save my life. A soldier took one arm and I the other and we dragged him to the roadside behind a large oak tree. .

The Lieutenant recognized my voice and said, "I am dying?" I could only reply, "Yes." "Tell my brother, the Major, where to find me." By this time we were in a perfect shower of lead, and men were dragging the wounded about me. I ordered all to be taken into a small brick dwelling nearby. I put the Lieutenant on a bed and made him as comfortable as possible.

I heard a commotion among the ambulance drivers. It proved to be a commander of the Confederate wounded, Colonel Young, mortally wounded. . . .and forbidding my men to touch him. I soon ended the trouble by ordering him to be placed in an ambulance and sent to the house of a friend who knew him.

At nine o'clock that night I found the Major (A. W. Mullins) as I was making my way to the front. I delivered the Lieutenant's message. As my ambulance train was halted, I concluded to lie down and get some sleep. The shouting of men and the neighing of horses did not prevent me. I had been mounted all day without food or rest.

By noon (Sunday, October 23) we were moving rapidly to the ford of the Big Blue, a few miles from (west of) Independence, where the battle was renewed in earnest. The cannonading was a fearful thing. Many of the shots were overleaping the timber ridges and falling in the rear of the cavalry. I hurried on to the front with an orderly and established my flag on the banks of the stream just after our men had passed over. The rebel line was plain to be seen some three hundred yards up the timber ridge. Lieutenant Colonel Crittenden was ordered to dismount the 7th cavalry, and move one column across the stream immediately following the line of skirmishes which seemed to be driving the enemy, who very stubbornly gave way as the main body under Colonel Crittenden advanced. The Colonel received a spent ball on his belt buckle which knocked him down. Soldier near raised him up, and I was going to send him to the ambulance, but he would not consent and (went) on with his regiment.

I felt comparatively secure here as we were out of rifle range. The wounded were being brought in rapidly. I soon had the bank of the stream covered with them. I was soon in sight of the battle line. Galloping up in the rear where Colonel (John F.) Philips and Staff were standing — the Colonel relieved General (E. B.) Brown — I reported. I was ordered to keep well up in the rear of the brigade. As I started back I noticed (General John B.) Sanborn's brigade deploying as they marched on in front of our brigade, who had had the lead from Independence and were well tired out.

As I moved up my ambulance train General Sanborn sent his Adjutant to request me to look after his dead and wounded as he did not know where to find his surgeons. I noticed several drop out, either dead or wounded, and ordered the ambulance to pick them up, and take them to a farmhouse nearby. Confederate dead and wounded were there, and some 15 or 20 Confederate surgeons who had been captured by our brigade. I was formally introduced to these gentlemen, and requested them to assist in caring for their wounded. This, they kindly agreed to do, but informed me that they had no supplies. I ordered supplies out of my wagons, and then requested Major Short to keep up with the brigade. We marched until about midnight, when we stopped to allow the men to get something to eat, and to bury one of our captains who was killed early that morning while leading the skirmishes at the Battle of the Big Blue. We buried the captain near a small town called Santa Fe in Kansas. We marched with our brigade all next day (October 24) in the rear. Near night, as we approached a place called Papinsville, our brigade was ordered in the advance. About midnight, as we approached the river, it began sprinkling rain.

While riding along with Colonel Philips, Commander 1st Brigade, at the head of the column, firing began in front, one or two shots, then several up and down the river, which told us that we were up with the enemy and had struck his main picket line. The command was halted and preparations made for attack. Soon as day came (October 25) we moved out and did not meet any opposition on this (north) side the river, (Marais des Cygnes) which we passed over and through the timber out into the prairie. About a mile beyond the river we turned a point in the road near Twin Mounds, which rose on our left to the height of 200 feet in sugar loaf form. About half a mile beyond Price had his men in line of battle. (They were) dismounted and standing 3 or 4 hundred yards along a small creek called Mine Creek. As soon as our column appeared in view the Confederate opened on us with six pieces of cannon, which was in front of the battle line. The solid shot struck the mounds over our heads and fairly shook the earth. As we were ready the bugles sounded the charge and 2 or 3 thousand cavalry swooped down upon them and captured the whole outfit before they could reload and fire again. The prisoners taken amounted to between 12 and 15 hundred, with two general officers and their staff, and six pieces of artillery. We followed up our success as related by Colonel (Wiley) Britton (6th Kansas Cavalry) on pages 374-7 of this volume. (Battles, Vol. IV.)

In May, 1865, (after his regiment, with its officers, had been mustered out), I was ordered to report to Major Carpenter, Medical Director, on board the steamer Baltic, then at St. Louis, and proceed to New Orleans. I had entered the U. S. Medical Corps after leaving the Volunteer service, and had been assigned to duty at Jefferson Barracks with the rank of Acting Asst. Surgeon, U. S. We passed down the Mississippi when it was out of its banks. We halted at Cairo for coaling. The wharf was flooded and the wooden sidewalks would give way when stepped on. One of our medical officers got a ducking. He thought I was lacking in chivalry because I did not plunge in and save him. As he went down between the planks, by spreading his arms he managed to save his "bacon." It being night and the paths tortuous, we lost our way. The Baltic steamed out. Our absence was soon noted; the vessel was ordered to stop. The engineer kept up an unearthly shriek to guide us to the steamer. We got on board pretty much after the manner of General Grant after the Battle of Belmont.

The old flagstaff of Fort Pillow was to be seen on the bluff. The river was policed by gunboats, and some distance below here we pulled one off a sandbar. The commander, I think Colonel Ellet, came aboard with his staff, and gave us the first news that we had of the capture of Jeff Davis. Instead of continuing our journey to New Orleans, we were ordered to stop at Vicksburg, and take on board the remaining prisoners from Andersonville, who had just arrived. We loaded up some 300 of these poor sick creatures, brought them to St. Louis and put them in ward at Jefferson Barracks. I never witnessed suffering to exceed that of these men, who were suffering from disease and the terrors of starvation.

On our way north, when near Memphis, we encountered the floating bodies of the soldiers who had perished by the blowing up of the Sultana. The channel and in fact the whole river was full of these poor comrades who had lost their lives after going through the war, most of them sick and wounded. We had a great deal of trouble to keep from running over them, as they were raising to the surface every few minutes. The river was full of skiffs and men gathering up the dead. We did not stop. Our own sick were in such bad condition we were anxious to get them to the hospital. They had almost every disease; many of them had the smallpox. We stopped on a Sabbath morning and buried all our dead on an island below St. Louis. We unloaded at Jefferson Barracks and then proceeded to St. Louis and went about cleaning and repainting decks. I then resigned and left the service.

All marginal notes (Doctor Trader adds) in Battles and Leaders of the Civil War, were made by John W. Trader, and relate to the personal relations he bore to the various incidents here recorded.

Mrs. Alice Blackman White Writing Book About Experiences In Operating Hotels

"I'm writing a book", said Mrs. Alice Blackman White, who for many years was a prominent hotel woman in Sedalia. "I'm telling of some of my experiences in the hotel business", she said and then added, "I certainly had some, too, and at one time I knew all about almost everybody in Sedalia."

Mrs. White has not lost her spirit with the years, and her blue eyes still sparkle behind her glasses. For many years her hair has been snow white and she has plenty to make it that way.

Mrs. White did not intend to be a hotel women, ahe wanted to have a home and family; but fate always changed her plans.

She was born Alice Hale the daughter of John and Eliza Bullock Hale, in London, Canada. Her father was a Canadian and her mother was form England. Her grandfather Hale was very wealthy and was a breeder of fast horses. Her grandfather Bullock was a Methodist minister, seceeding from the Church of England with Wesley. Mrs. White's mother, however, remained an Episcopalian and Mrs. White still belongs to the Calvary Episcopal Church. She was pleased last week when the Rev. Edward Sims, rector of the church, called on her and brought her some flowers.

There were two sisters and three brothers in Mrs. White's family, and her parents with their children moved to Marshall County, Kan., when she was a little girl, and there was she raised.

When she was grown she met a newspaper man from Pittsburg, Kan., Theodore Van Horn Blackman and married him. He was from a prominent family and his mother, who was a cripple, lived with them. Their first child was a girl, Natalie, and their second a boy, John Hale Blackman, and it was when Natalie was four years old and John Hale was two months old, that Mr. Blackman found another woman. The other woman was married, too, had two sons, whom she left with her husband and a little girl which she took with her, and after both had received their divorces she and her little girl just moved in and Alice was left to do whatever she could. His mother was crushed over the whole affair, but there was nothing she could do.

It was with a cook stove and $6 that Alice Blackman set up a bakery. She would work until 2 o'clock in the morning baking and then sell her baking through the day. She did this until her baby was old enough to leave and then she put her two children in a convent in Nevada and went on a traveling job. This was an unhappy setup both for her and her children, but it was all she could do at that time.

It was in 1906 that a man in Joplin traded a zinc mine for the Royal Hotel in Sedalia, which was located where the present post office building now stands. The building was then sold and Mrs. Blackman borrowed money and bought the building where the St. Francis Hotel is now. It was called the Gold Block building and Capt. Gold had a carpet house there. It was on Dec. 15, that she took over the building and the entire place had to be cleaned and fixed for a hotel, but on Christmas day Mrs. Blackman was ready to serve Christmas dinner.

She named the hotel The Blackman for herself, and there was a little Hagey heater that burned wood in every room. In the hall was a large coal stove and in the center of each hall was a coal and wood bin.

It was while operating the Blackman Hotel that she met Mr. White. Mr. White, so he said, had a farm and plenty of money and he thought that a woman who had a hotel should have plenty of money, too. When he proposed marriage she accepted. This, she thought, would give her an opportunity to rear her children, educate them and be with them in a home as a mother should.

She sold her hotel, paid her debts, and when all was done she didn't have very much left. She went with Mr. White to his farm in Michigan but when they got there he didn't have a farm — in fact, he didn't have anything, and he was very disillusioned — he found she didn't have anything either. He wasn't good to her and her children — so she went to Grand Rapids where she worked in the largest department store there for six years.

Then, her brother, who was manager of the Hienez Pickle Factory at Omaha, Nebr., had a friend by the name of McLaughlin who had an opportunity to buy the Royal Hotel, where Mrs. White originally started, and he bought it. He was elected to Congress and went to Washington, D. C., from his home in York, Nebr., and wanted somebody to run the hotel. Mrs. White's brother told him to talk to her and she gave up the job in Grand Rapids and came back to Sedalia, to the hotel where she had been in the first place. They changed the name to the Liberty and for a number of years Mrs. White had the hotel. She built on a large dining room and served banquets to all of the civic clubs, other organizations and even governors of the state.

Mrs. Alice B. White

She had a Negro cook, Polly, the best cook anywhere, Mrs. White said, and she served some wonderful meals.

Mrs. White was active in things then, too. The Business and Professional Women's Club was organized at her Liberty Hotel and she was a charter member. She is still a member of the American Legion Auxiliary and has served as its president several times, she belongs to the Elks Auxiliary and served as its president twice, she was a member of the DAR, the War Dad's Auxiliary, the Chamber of Commerce, the Missouri Democrats Club, the OES, and is a past president of Parley of the Legion. During the World War II she was active in the Mother's Club.

In the meantime her children grew up. She gave them all the education they would take. They both were musical, both had lovely voices. They took the voices after their father, she said, he sang for years in a Presbyterian Church where he lived. She admitted that she had a voice, too, but she never had an opportunity to do anything about it.

The girl played the piano at the Sedalia Theatre and later married. She had a little girl, Natalie Frances, whom they called "Tootie". When Tootie was about four she had some disease of the eyes and lost her sight. But that never stopped her. She did the things most girls do. She is a very talented musician and singer. She lives in Evanston, Ill., with her mother, and does a great deal of singing. She has a talent for writing, too, — both prose and poetry.

John Hale Blackman went into service when he was 16. He enlisted during the first World War and lied about his age. His mother never tried to get him out. He served overseas and when he was discharged from service he went on the stage. He dropped the Blackman from his name and became Jack Hale. He, too, was a good singer. He was on the stage some, but mostly he produced shows. Then came World War II. He served overseas in that, too, and came out of service a major. Then he came home to his mother, who by this time had retired from business.

Her flourishing business at the Liberty Hotel died with the building of the Bothwell Hotel. The banquets went to the new hotel, the Liberty Hotel went out of business and the building was torn down.

Then she established a cafeteria at the place where Beverly's now is located, but several years ago went out of business. She lives at 217 East Fifth. That was where her son came home to live with her, and then he died.

He hadn't been all she had hoped for, but he had been kind and sweet to her always, he had never talked back to her, he had taken her places, thought of her pleasure, and came back to be with her. He had been too free-hearted, had trusted people too much, she said, he couldn't hold on to his money. He knew he had made mistakes and it worried him —but he had so much good in him ,too. He was worse to himself than anybody else. The mother raised her glasses and wiped the tears from her eyes—it was hard —so hard, even yet, to give him up.

This year she is going to Winter Haven, Fla., to visit her brother, the only one of her family still living. He recently built a new home there — but before she goes she is going to finish the book — the book of her life that will be a colorful story of not just the heartaches, but the humor, the people she met in her business, the experiences of her days of operating a hotel.

"I have always been a builder," she said. "I never tore down."

1,800 Visitors at Fair Sign Historical Society Guest Book

Exhibits, Music, Dances and Other Entertainment

The guest book in the Pettis County Historical exhibit at the Missouri State Fair was signed by 1,800 people from all over the United States and only about one-sixth of the people who saw the exhibit stopped to sign.

The big program of the week was presented on the first Sunday afternoon but programs were given every morning and every afternoon of the fair except Thursday, the day of the tornado.

The State Fair Association was anxious to have a place for fair visitors to rest and be entertained and the rest and recreational lounge was taken over by the Historical Society to see that such a program was carried out.

The programs and exhibit were planned by Mrs. F. S. Leach, chairman, C. F. Scotten, president of the Historical Society, and Judge J. V. Kesterson and J. L. Curry.

Music and Dancing

Those taking part on the musical programs were Mrs. J. W. Watts, Mrs. T. E. Gasperson, Mrs. George Lovercamp, Mrs. Ernest Liebel, Bob and Jack Chambers, Miss Mary Jo Case, Miss Judy Case and Mrs. Mae Moser, who served as accompanist.

Young dancers taking part in the programs were Arlene Hanning, Gayle Harris, Mary Kay Burns, Nancee Homan, Justine Gloss, Janet Homan, Jo Ann Patrick, Betsy Siegel, Pete Siegel, Larry Reed, Linda Reed, Becky Thomas, Opal Carson, Sue Turk, Barbara Dougherty, Carol Lawson, Donald Whitehead, David Sparks, Karen Sparks, Steven White, Vickie Atkinson, from the Peg'ee Hewitt Homan Dancing School.

Margot Engle, Peggy Brock, Marsha Brown, Cheryl Stephens, Caroyln Leaton, Carolyn Staley, Johnnie Engle, Elizabeth Sullivan, Nancy Prowell, Patsy Middaugh, Johnnie Sauraghe, Carol Hillman, Susan Priess, Marsha Evans, Jennifer Sullivan, Barbara Zalin, Judy Ray, Russell Leaton, Linda Roe, Judy Kuykendall, Julia Zinn, Becky Hagadorin, Kay Klein, Evelyn Mitchener, Cathern Carter, Lynn Engstem, Gaylene Meusheke, Elizabeth Finch, Sharon Nugent, Karen Marsh, Karen Middaugh, Rosemay Elliott, Reba Yokley, Kay Robbins, Becky Goldin, Janice Erickson, Cora Bramble, Beverly Richards, Carolyn Bowden, Betty Deal, Jo Ann Dennis, John Deal, Louis J. Malin, Andrea Bryan, Peggy Brock, Susan Alexander, Donna Evans, Nancy Priess, Carolyn Thomas, and Patti Jo Hamblin from the Harper's School of Artistic Dance.

Pupils of Miss Dorothy Fight of Warrensburg were also on the programs.

Pictures of the beauty of Missouri which were furnished by the Missouri Division of Resources and Development and the Missouri Conservation Commission were shown. Miss Mary Catherine Scotten operated the machines which were loaned by Ed Zalin and the school sound machne loaned by Forrest Drake and Pinkney Miller.

Hostesses were Mrs. E. F. Yancey, Miss Nina Harris, Mrs. T. H. Yount, Mrs. Fred Rose, Mrs. Emery Meyers, Mrs. William Schutt, Mrs. J. C. Saunders and Mrs. Perry Reed. Some of them were in costume.

Mrs. Perry Reed of La Monte had at the exhibit a chest made from wood that was used as a loading chute in the early days on the Mississippi River at Ste. Genevieve and the millions of bushels of wheat that went down the chute left a design on the wood that looks like hand carving. H. R. Hiles of Troy brought a collection of things which included a music box over 100 years old, old bicycles, saddles, one of which had belonged to a bandit who had killed more than 100 people, and many other interesting articles.

Mrs. Fred Kueck had a collection of arrowheads, and a conch shell necklace estimated to be 1,000 years old. There were two pictures, one, "The Dairy" painted by Sir Edwin Dansweer in England in 1830. These were brought to this country by J. L. Cartwright in 1863 and were exhibited by Tom Cartwright. John Henry Brooks had a large brass kettle which was used for cooking in the early days. The exhibit had many more items that came from the home of early settlers in this country. A great many of the things from the Historical Society's museum in the Pettis County courthouse were on display, among them being the swords of Generals Eisenhower, MacArthur, Bradley, Patton and Mark Clark, and the big black bear that stands in the courthouse corridor was in the exhibit, too.

The programs and the exhibit were a lot of work but the Historical Society members feel that it was certainly worth all the time and work they put into it. The cooperation they were given meant a great deal, too, especially the youngsters who danced throughout the week and had to pay their way in to the fair every time they appeared on a program.

Lewis Urges All Unions To Unite

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30—(AP)—Mine Union Leader John L. Lewis today put out a Labor Day message telling other labor organizations they all had better unite or eventually they will be destroyed.

It was the latest move by Lewis to persuade trade unions to unite in order to accomplish their joint aims.

"American labor faces an era of danger and of threats to its very existence," said the message put out by Lewis and the United Mine Workers' other international officers. It continued:

"There are those politicians beholden to reactionary interests, and those who are still advocates of the institution of human slavery, who would take from us the only effective weapon we have in our struggle for a better America.

"There are those intellectually corrupt corporate interests in this country who would sell a free, Democratic and progressive America down the river in their mad gamble for unchallenged control of the economic future of our great nation."

The UMW statement said that labor union members want a unified labor movement but that "it is a house divided against itself" because various union leaders are jealous of each other and won't agree to unity.

"The spectacle of the segments of organized labor in America heaving and shoving in all directions—or in no direction—gives aid and comfort to those who would destroy us and institute their own modern version of serfdom," was Lewis' warning.

City Keeps Stork Busy During Year

The flap of wings, which has accompanied the stork on his visits to Sedalia, has been muffled in the past several months by a pair of twin jets. These jets have been added as standard equipment to aid the bird in his delivery of babies as business has been much heavier so far this year.

In 1951 the stork, under his own power, was able to deliver 369 babies from January until Aug. 27. However, this year with an added burden of 43 for the same period an additional burst of power was needed for the fast trips which were required.

During 1951, from the first of the year until Aug. 27, the hospitals reported the following number of births — Bothwell, 307; Woodland, 53, and No. 2 Hospital, 9. For the same period this year the hospitals reported the following births — Bothwell, 346; Woodland, 54, and Hospital No. 2, 11.

So Sedalia's motto can now be: "Sedalia, where folks enjoy life, and life comes often."

Martin To Go Before Court For Slaying

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 30—(AP)—William Merle Martin, one of the FBI's ten most wanted criminals captured here early today, will be arranged "probably Tuesday on a murder charge."

Local FBI agents said Martin will be arraigned before U. S. Commissioner William Bean for the slaying of Deputy Sheriff Willard Carver near Olathe, Kan., June 23.

Martin's arrest came a few hours after another man on the FBI's most wanted listed was captured at Texas City, Tex. Taken into custody there was Joseph Franklin Bent Jr., 25.

The 42-year-old Martin was transferred to federal custody today after he was captured heading into St. Louis in a car he had stolen from a deputy sheriff's garrage in nearby Jefferson County.

FBI agents said Martin had not admitted the Kansas slaying.

Martin's body was gashed and bruised from his wild flight through woods and over rocky countryside where he had been hiding for two days. He was haggard and weak from hunger. When arrested he said: "Well fellows, you got me. I'm unarmed. Don't shoot."

The red-haired Martin said he had hidden by day and crawled and stumbled over the rugged country in the dark to Cedar Hill, 33 miles west of here. There, after darkness, he slipped into Deputy Sheriff Thomas Powell's garage and backed the car out. The officer saw his car being stolen and telephoned the State Highway Patrol. The alarm was sounded.

Martin said the worst part of his grim hide-and-seek with the officers was not being able to smoke.

Iran Rejects 2-Power Plan On Oil Peace

TEHRAN, Iran, Aug. 30—(AP)—Premier Mohammed Mossadegh flatly rejected tonight a three-point proposal from President Truman and Prime Minister Churchill for settlement of the Iranian oil dispute that would have put millons of dollars in Iran's nearly bankrupt treasury.

In a broadcast communique, the frail but iron-willed Nationalist leader explained that U. S. and British diplomats had handed him the proposal. Then he said:

"I told them this government can never agree to this message."

He deferred the formal answer to the formal offer—which would have involved World Court arbitration of compensation due the British-owned Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. for nationalized oil properties and negotiations wth the AIOC for resumption of the flow of Iranian oil to world markets.

Despite some Iranian snubs in the past, the U. S. offered to give Iran 10 million dollars to bolster the government in its immediate crisis. Britain proposed to relax her blockade and other sanctions and help the Persian Gulf kingdom sell its oil abroad.

U. S. Ambassador Loy Henderson and British Charge d'Affaires George Middleton laid down the proposals at a 45-minute conference with the premier in his guarded residence this afternoon.

The terms were practically the same as those they discussed with Mossadegh last Wednesday. The diplomats had come away from the 3½-hour meeting looking glum.

The British Embassy said "this generous offer" was a sincere effort to end the 18-month deadlock.

The fact the offer was made jointly in the name of President Truman and Prime Minister Churchill stressed the importance they attach to restoring the economic stability of this strategic country and to blocking a possible Red coup.

Public School Is Basic to The Survival Of America

WASHINGTON — The seventh annual report of the profession to the public, released here today by the National Education Association, warns that American enterprise and ingenuity are not inherited by the children and youth of the nation but can be kept alive only by the American program of public education.

The Report, entitled "The Public School", is released by its author, Willard E. Givens, executive secretary of the NEA, as thousands of public schools throughout the nation prepare to open their doors for another acaemic year.

"American enterprise and ingenuity are known around the world," says Secretary Givens. "They are envied by some, misinterpreted by others, respected by all. At work in a free nation they have produced the wealthiest and most powerful nation in the history of mankind.

Three R's Not All

"These traits must be consciously cultivated. One of the purposes of the modern public school is to keep them vigorously alive. The public school does not regard the Three R's as the whole of education. It places great emphasis also upon those robust qualities of initiative, self-dependence, and imagination which have meant so much to the material success of the American people."

Describing the school as a "vital center of community life," Secretary Givens says. "The public school upholds for its students those freedoms which brought their ancestors to this continent. The school that subjects its students to the yoke, produces citizens who are willing to wear it."

Calling attention to the attempts being made today to weaken American ideology and to destroy American freedoms, Secretary Givens emphasizes that freedom is more important today than at any other time in the nation's history.

"Our ability to withstand the menace of communism may well depend upon the vigor with which we demonstrate the vitality of our belief in our freedoms, and the persistence with which we resist the encroachments of dictatorship upon our free public schools," he adds.

Cooperation From Home

The Report discusses the necessity of close cooperation between the home and the public school. "Time has greatly changed the home and the public school as educational institutions," it continues. "The large family home and its domestic economy in which youth were prepared for an identical domestic economy are far behind us in the stream of history.

"Modern life takes the members of the home to the office and shop and factory as well as to the field to earn a living in skills that are highly specialized. Even a large percentage of the mothers are employed. The public school has taken over in some measure many of the educational activities of the home.

"However, parents, have not abdicated their responsibilty," the Report emphasizes. "No school operates effectively very long without a high level of community understanding, interest and participation, which involves not only parents but other citizens. . . .Its program supplements and reinforces the educational opportunities which the home and the community afford. The public school is not a detached institution. . . . The close relationship of the public school to home and community is a protection against its use to promote the interests of a powerful party or the propaganda of a dictator."

Touches Every Citizen

Discussing the unifying effect of the public school, Secretary Givens emphasizes that no other institution except the public school touches the life of every citizen.

"All Americans do not belong to the same church," he points out. "They are not all members of one political party. They are not all engaged in like occupations. Their ancestors came from many countries of the world. They represent all races of mankind. . . .Our nation has always treasured differences as great sources of strength. This freedom is recognized around the world as an American trait.

"The public school is the instrument of a society of free men. It brings together all the children of a community, regardless of the economic or social status of their families, and without discrimination because of their cultural background. It provides opportunity for every child to develop his own talents and to find his future career in a field best suited to his interest and capacity, whatever may have been the vocation of his father or members of his family."

At Terrace Bay, Ontario, the U. S. editors boarded the transcontinental train of the Canadian Pacific railway to return to Toronto, thus adding still another type of transportation to the plane, bus and water carriers we had used already. Sightseeing became a major interest as we scanned the deep woodlands bordering the railroad for a possible sight of moose, bear or other woodland creature. Beaver and muskrat houses were to be seen at frequent intervals, but we saw no wild animals.

Three of us editors had an uneasy moment when we left the paper mill in our escort's car to catch the 11:55 a.m. train. A freight engine on a switch track at the mill blocked the road while we could hear the wail in the distance of the approaching transcontinental train; but we made it to the station in time.

At this point we had been traveling together for 10 days. There was so much to do and see there was little opportunity to sit still. Now for 20 hours 30 editors were going to be penned up in two Pullman cars. We had all become fast friends but this train trip put the test to whether 30 people of varying moods and personalities could hit it off together. They did. Many little irritations simply were ignored. Some of the editors were so ebullient they staged a foot race on the station lawn at the Chapleau stop. I don't think it did some of the older fellows much good — such strenuous exercise. At 54 I chose to be a spectator.

The locomotive which pulled our train through scenic central Ontario bore a large colored crown insignia. This indicated that the engine was the same that pulled the train on which rode King George VI during his visit to the Dominion of Canada.

A long evening ahead before bedtime inspired some one of the group to get the gang together. The only place likely for such a number appeared to be the diner, but this proved to be unavailable. Someone else solved the problem after the Chapleau stop. When we were rolling again, the word was passed around the Pullmans to move forward through the coaches. We reached a dead end at the baggage car door. But lo, it swung open and in we went. So until near midnight Editor Harry Polk of Williston, North Dakota led us in song after song until the chorus almost reached perfection in practice for a special dinner event coming the following night in Toronto.

The baggage master got a real kick out of this unusual entertainment while all of us stood singing and swaying with the car as the train rounded many curves.

Upon arrival in Toronto we went directly to the Royal York Hotel for breakfast as guests of the Canadian Pacific Railways: Mr. J. Johnson, manager, the Royal York Hotel, and Mr. J. W. Berry Regional Public Relations Officer, Canadian Pacific Railways. Like all the rest, this was a magnificent meal. It became my turn to act as spokesman for the editors thanking our hosts for their hospitality.

Then followed a tour of sections of the Toronto Subway System, Canada's only subway, now under construction.

That night came a notable event, the occasion when we joined the ranks of some 175 other United States newspapermen to become members of the K. O. B. Club. An element of mystery had surrounded anticipation of membership, which was revealed to us when we received our pins at that night's dinner meeting in King Edward Hotel. The tiny corn cob emblem initialed K.O.B. means: "Know Ontario Better." After our wonderful twelve days' tour we were certainly qualified for membership.

During the banquet festivities, the editors participated in the program with original presentations and gifts to our hosts. The baggage car song practice had its reward when the editors were called on to sing, "O Canada" in honor of our Canadian friends, and to join in singing "Allouette," the traditional French - Canadian folk song, led by Hon. Louis P. Cecile, Minister of Travel and Publicity.

Another of the beauty spots of the Ontario tour was the Royal Botanical gardens at Hamilton. We spent an hour walking the paths of this garden paradise. In Hamilton we were luncheon guests of the Sheraton Hotels in Royal Connaught Hotel, R. P. Peck, general manager. Here we met leading business men and residents of this bustling Canadian city which has won renown as the "Pittsburgh of Canada." I visited with the editor of the Hamilton newspaper and casually asked if he knew of any Scrutons thereabout. There are supposed to be a lot of them in Canada — the telephone listed an Emily Scruton in Ottawa. The Hamilton editor replied that he knew a fine elderly man who had worked for many years as a printer on his newspaper, but currently was not working because the Union was striking his plant which, however, was still putting out a newspaper. So we changed the subject.

The finale of the Ontario trip was at the General Brock Hotel and a visit to Niagara Falls and the interesting moving picture sets on the Canadian side of the falls where a movie is in process of being produced. We also joined with some 350 members of the National Editorial Association for a buffet dinner and reception, a part of the latter's convention activities in which we joined, sort of getting back in harness again.

All during that wonderful trip I never had a feeling of being in a foreign land. Our reception throughout was indicative of that good old Southern hospitality one encounters in some places below the Mason-Dixon line.

Traveling by automobile out of Buffalo heading west I realized I surely was in good old United States atmosphere as we passed the Buffalo plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation where a huge sign placed by workers outside the fence read: "This Plant On Strike," and another one by the company inside the fence which read: "Help Wanted! Apply at Employment Office."

Governor Resents Columnist's Suggestion He Be Impeached

By Drew Pearson

(Copyright, 1951, By The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

(NOTE TO EDITORS: During his vacation, Drew Pearson invited several public figures with whom he has taken issue to write guest columns, guaranteeing them complete freedom of expression. One of these was Governor Fuller Warren of Florida, whom Pearson has criticized for receiving large campaign contributions from members of the gambling fraternity.

Pearson informed Governor Warren that he would print anything he wanted to write in reply to Pearson's criticism, and herewith is offered Warren's guest column. In referring to Pearson as "Colonel," Governor Warren presumably has in mind that on his inaugural day he appointed Pearson an honorary colonel on his own staff.)

Gov. Fuller Warren of Florida On The Washington Merry-Go-Round

TALLAHASSEE, FLA. — Col. D. Pearson, the conductor of this coruscating column, has invited me to fill the space today. I am grateful for his generous invitation.

Little can be said for Col. Pearson's prowess as a pugilist, but much can be said for his capacity as a chronicler. He perhaps has had no peer in the field of English fiction since Chaucer, or maybe since the translator of Grimm's Fairy Tales.

Like all gifted men, Col. Pearson has a few failings. Shortly after General William Tecumseh Sherman toured Georgia, a homeless citizen of Atlanta remarked that the General was a great man but a little careless with fire. Something similar could be said about Col. Pearson. Beyond cavil, he is a clever and cagey writer, but a little careless with facts. President Roosevelt went so far as to say he was a "chronic liar." I can't go quite that far. Col. Pearson sometimes tells the truth. Occasionally, the truth creeps into his widely read column. It may not be intentional, but it's there.

Col. Pearson usually mangles the fair form of truth when he turns his column into a vehicle of propaganda for an aspiring politician — as he frequently does. He also lacerates the beautiful body of truth when he prostitutes his column to character assassination — as he often does.

Once Col. Pearson has fathered a falsehood, he usually remains faithful to it. Many untrue statements in his column have been pointed out to Col. Pearson, but he rarely has retracted. He does, however, resort to the disarming device of voluntarily correcting trivial untruths, while sticking loyally by his big lies.

It would be impossible, in the limited space allowed me, to recount all the vast mass of misrepresentation Col. Pearson has perpetrated on his reading public. I use the qualifying "reading," because some people have been deceived so many times by Col. Pearson's fairy tales — masquerading as fact — that they have quit reading him.

It is possible, however, to make a rough estimate of Col. Pearson's total output of prevarication. Although no detailed tabulation has been kept, I estimate that Baron Munchausen's contemporary counterpart has told not less than two dozen lies about me within the past two years. Assuming I have received only my pro rata share of Baron Pearson's prevarications, this data may be projected to the conclusion that this modern Munchausen has concocted twenty-four falsehoods about every person on whom he has unleashed his yelping pack of lies.

Projecting this scientific calculation further, it can be estimated that during the past two years it has suited the purposes of Col. Pearson to smear at least 2,000 persons (this estimate is almost laughably low). Thus, it mathematically follows that Col. Pearson has manufactured, within the short time of two years, 48,000 units of mendacity. That is mass production on a massive scale! The miracles of mass production achieved by General Motors sink into insignificance when compared to Col. Pearson's assembly line assaults on truth.

Pearson has a keen and cunning knowledge of libel law. Libel laws of most States are such that a writer of Col. Pearson's uncanny skill can smear an innocent person's good reputation and yet escape conviction for defamation. Lefty Grove could not cut the outside corner of the plate with the precision by which Pearson can ruin a reputation and yet not be prosecuted for libel. With a crafty artificer like Pearson loose in the land, our antiquated libel laws afford little, if any, protection to American citizens.

At the apparent behest of his pet candidate for President, on the 3rd day of June, 1952, Col. Pearson smeared me in a column containing a curious congeries of almost incoherent lies. After making a series of untrue accusations against me, Baron Pearson advised the Florida Legislature to incorporate his charges into articles of impeachment against me.

Pearson concealed from his readers the recorded fact that the Florida House of Representatives already had rejected and refuted his stale accusations by a vote of 76 to 6. One Florida newspaper, which carries his column, apologized for Pearson's nonsensical suggestion by pointing out that he had warmed over some sour and discredited dregs which already had been thrown out by the Florida Legislature.

Space will not permit a detailed account of his journalistic gibberish, but I will cite two of the monstrosities in this Pearsonian piece of prevarication. The Potomac Prevaricator, in an obvious attempt to discredit me to benefit his pet Presidential Candidate, alleged that under Florida law I swore in an affidavit that contributions to my Gubernatorial campaign in 1948 totaled $8,825.00 In 1948, Florida law did not require that I or any other candidate swear in an affidavit what the total campaign contributions were. In 1948 Florida law merely required a candidate to file a sworn statement showing the amount of campaign expenditures known to him.

Pearson further alleged that Section 102.62 of the Florida Statutes in 1948 limited the total contributions to a Governor's campaign to $15,000. This is another Pearson whopper. Section 102.62 of the Florida Statutes at that time did not place any limit whatsoever on the total contributions to a Governor's campaign fund.

It is not easy to understand why Pearson attempted to deceive his readers about the plain provisions of this law which had been on the Statute Books of Florida for 25 years.

Although I have felt constrained to write this column as a sort of clinical contribution to the cause of truth, I want it known that I am not angry at Col. Pearson. He seems to have a certain benevolence of nature which makes it difficult for me to feel harshly toward him because of his frequent defections from fact and his recurring tramplings upon truth. Furthermore, having actively participated in politics for more than a quarter century, I do not easily become indignant at an Apostle of Ananias.

Moreover, despite his mounting mass of mendacity, Col. Pearson does some good. On rare and infrequent occasions truth creeps into his column. When it does, sometimes the public weal is served.

Even if I could I would not silence Pearson. I would, however, like to see the fearless fictioner strike a better balance between fact and falsehood — say, 50-50. That would be a great gain for truth.

THE STORY: Hector Fielding, in order to forget an unfortunate love affair, has been trying to make over the life of David Carlson, an uneducated truck driver who is interested in photography. Now Hector is beginning to realize that there are many pitfalls in "this game of playing God."

VI

THE next afternoon I was shopping when I ran into Miss Mitford. She taught me English Lit in high school, and she was my favorite teacher. She hadn't changed, except for being a little heavier and grayer and I took her to a near-by restaurant for tea.

She brought me up to date on a number of my old classmates, and then I asked: "Did you ever teach a boy named David Carlson—six or eight years back?"

"Indeed I did!" she exclaimed, setting her cup down abruptly. "I was his homeroom teacher in tenth grade. He quit school in May that year, and it was a blow to me. How do you happen to know him?"

I told her briefly. She listened with acute interest.

"It's funny, your mentioning David," she said reflectively. "Because I was thinking about him just recently. There are many cases of bright young boys who hate school. But David is, by any standards, exceptional. The day he left school, he came to me at closing time and said goodby so sweetly, such a big, manly-looking chap. I sat there at my desk after he'd gone and just cried. I thought I'd failed, somehow."

I poured her another cup of tea nd said, "You're discouraging e. You tried and failed."

"Well, possibly the years have mproved his home situation. He lid have very real family troubles, and I think that's the main reason ne couldn't adjust to school. The father drank, and sometimes got put in jail, and the home was held together by the mother. He never had a chance, you see. And he got married so young! To a girl three years older than he was—Ida Sommers. Wore spike heels to school. You know the type. Impudent little thing. Knew all the wisecracks."

"I can imagine," I said.

"Well, at any rate," she continued, "I was shocked to hear David had married her. Not the type. I'm no geneticist, but I knew the quality of David's mind.

"One night about a year ago I was coming home from a movie with my sister and her husband, and I saw David. He was with a crowd of loud, ill-dressed men and women, who were straggling along the sidewalk, taking up most of the room. He looked me full in the face, a long, desperate sort of look. But he didn't speak or give sign of recognition, and the incident has rather haunted me at times since."

• • •

WHEN David arrived that night he had a package with him. "Here," he said. "This is to replace that glass I dropped last night when I was drying dishes."

"Don't be a dope. I have seven more."

"It's the principle of the thing," answered David. Then, ingenuously, "But I didn't know what an expensive thing I was dropping. A buck and a quarter for just a glass!"

"That's called a footed tumbler," I corrected. "Kathy and I picked out the pattern years ago. Gave them to each other for birthdays and such. I've got eight goblets too."

He took down a teacup and held it up curiously. "This here cup now, I guess it was expensive too?"

"That's English bone china, and yes, I guess it was. I didn't have to buy it, though. Mother used it for years, and gave it to Kathy and me when she moved to California."

He was hot on the trail now. He held up a spoon next, turning it this way and that, handling it with gentleness and respect. "Sterling silver—that much I do know. But how much would just a spoon like this cost?"

I told him and he wrinkled his brow. "And yet you eat off it every day!"

"There's no point in having things if you don't use them."

I picked up the silver cake knife and ran my fingers over it.

"This silver was going to be my wedding present to Kathy. I bought silver with any extra money that came my way. Now I have a complete service for eight and no Kathy."

David ambled around the room, pricing each item. I jumped him. "Oh, come off it, David. The cost doesn't matter."

"I guess not, but I can't help comparing the way you live to. . . . Tell me something, Hector. How much money do you make?"

When I answered frankly, he looked incredulous.

"You're kiddin'! I make more money than you!"

• • •

HIS voice was anguished. He flung himself into the reading chair and stared around the apartment, frustration clouding his eyes. Finally he muttered, "You live so nice!"

I brought him a cup of coffee. "And you want to know how I do it?"

"Yes!" He looked at me humbly. "I'd like to know how to spend money."

For the rest of the evening, I tried to tell him. It was an interesting conversation, to me, because I hadn't ever analyzed how I did spend it. Frugality is so habit-forming. He listened as though every word was a pearl of wisdom, and I had to watch myself to be sure I didn't overstate or understate facts.

When the subject got around to clothes, he insisted on going to my closet and examining every item. "You know," he said, "I'd sure like to have me a gabardine raincoat like yours. Would you go with me and help pick one out?"

So I became his shopping guide.

Odds and Ends By News Staff

Kenny, nine years old, had had fun at the fair as only a little boy can have. He had $1.50 to spend and he spent it—most of it at the carnival grounds. Then he had just money enough left to buy a foot-long hotdog. He bought the hotdog and started for the bus—he was homeward bound—but suddenly he remembered something, something very important. He had spent all of his money for the hotdog and didn't have money to ride home on the bus.

Kenny isn't the first person who did just that—spent all their money before they realized they didn't have bus fare home—but Kenny did what most people wouldn't have thought of doing. He took his hotdog back and got his money refunded.

When he got home he told his mother what had happened and she asked in a surprised tone: "Why, Kenny, did they take the hotdog back?"

"Well," said Kenny, "they didn't want to, but I put the hotdog down on the counter and told them I had to have the money to ride home and they gave it to me."

Just what the people at the stand did with the returned hotdog the mother is wondering. They likely threw it in the garbage and charged it up to charity. —H.L.

Bryan Reports

Sedalia Minister Runs Into Croaks Of Frogs and Buzzing Hordes of Mosquitoes From the Canals of Bangkok in Thailand

By Rev. David M. Bryan
Pastor of the First Christian Church of Sedalia, Now On Round-the-World Tour.

BANGKOK, Thailand—My first introduction to old Siam, now called Thailand, was not altogether a pleasant one. I arrived at the Oriental Hotel at 2:00 in the morning to find there had been a mix-up in reservation and that there was no bed for me. A very perturbed nightman got busy with a primitive telephone and finally found space for me and my friends. I shall never forget these first impressions of Bangkok as I rode through dirty streets in the early morning hours. Everywhere homeless people were still moving about aimlessly or were stretched out sleeping on the ground. Everywhere trishaw (a modernized version of the jinrikishaw, peddled like a bicycle) boys were wandering about or sleeping in the tiny seats of their trishaws. Bangkok is a city of canals with one beside every road and in front of every house. By their lusty choruses, millions of frogs and night birds and insects added to the weirdness of the night. An army of mosquitoes added their bit by buzzing and diving about like a swarm of jet fighters. It seemed that they seldom missed. Thus were my first hours spent in the home of "Anna and the King of Siam."

Overproduction of Food

Thailand is one of those rare oriental nations that actually produces much more food than it can consume. Rice is the staple food of the Siamese but these 18,000,000 people are able to export about half of what their fertile fields produce.

Yesterday I hired a car and drove 60 or 70 miles out into the countryside just to see how the rural people live and work. Rice fields stretched as far as one could see in every direction and every field was a shallow lake. This is the middle of the planting season and every man, woman and child was busy preparing fields, plowing with water buffalo, or wading in knee-deep water and mud, tenderly placing the young rice shoots in their places. On the narrow banks that separate the tiny fields and dam the water, their swarmed the naked children and babies too young to work. The whole countryside is a shallow lake, crisscrossed with low mud dams. The people live in little grass and mud huts built on a little mound in the midst of this water. Their lives revolve about an environment of mud, water and rice. This is no less true in Bangkok, the capital of over a million people.

If you should go to Bismarck, N. D., and drive a stake directly through the earth you would come out at Bangkok, probably in one of her myriad canals.

This morning I arose before 5 o'clock to take a tour through the famous floating markets of this city. I hired a boat and began a half day cruise of the canals. Here, along the canals and rivers of Bangkok, one finds the Siamese living in their unique way, just as they have lived for centuries. Their homes front on the canals and are built on poles protruding out over the water. The canals are the highways of these urban Siamese. They are also the bathtub, the dishpan, the sidewalk, the marketplace, and the reservoir of drinking water. Rivers and canals are clogged with sampans and other types of crude house boats. Here even the temples front the waterways and in the early morning hours the water swarms with yellow robed Buddhist priests, paddling about in small canoes, begging their daily bread. I even saw a "canal hearse." The draped corpse in a canoe piloted by a Buddhist priest led the procession followed by boats of funeral musicians, professional mourners and the family.

Bathe in Canal

This morning as I rode through the congested canals of Bangkok I watched the people as they went about their morning tasks. Many were standing waist deep in the canals, bathing. Others leaned over the edge of their boats (or porches) washing their dishes or their clothes. Here in a glance one could see most all the daily activities of these Siamese canal dwellers' lives. Even the markets were afloat here. As my boatman pushed and scooted his way through the jammed waterways we met a myriad of these tiny commercial boats. There was the tiny coffee boat delivering hot coffee by the cup full, the meat boat (about one-fourth of the size of a canoe) with stacks of fresh meat, vegetable boats, boats loaded with fruits, trinkets, fish or edible sea weed. Of course there were a host of beetlenut boats from which, for just a few cents, one could buy a chew that would last for hours. I couldn't help feeling a certain incongruity when I noted among the Siamese trinkets of one boat a few packages of Colgate tooth paste and Camel cigarettes. America seems to touch even the lives of these water dwellers of Siam.

Thailand is a land of temples. In Bangkok alone there are over 300 glittering temples whose graceful votive spires flash and scintillate in the tropical sun. Buddhism is the oficial religion of the Siamese and in Bangkok alone there are over 50,000 priests. They present a colorful sight when they pour out into the streets in the morning, dressed in brilliant yellow robes and equipped with their copper alms bowls or begging bags.

White Man Unmolested

For centuries, Siam has been a free and independent nation. Consequently one doesn't find here the deep resentment against the white man that is so common in other oriental nations. Even at those frequent times when the Siamese declare war on each other (only a few months ago their army fought a pitched battle with their navy) the white man and his property are never molested.

Siam's friendly attitude toward the United States is of long standing. In the 1860s King Nangkut wrote to President Lincoln and kindly offered to stock the United States with elephants "to roam its jungles and provide beasts of burden." Mr. Lincoln thanked the king and explained that his government's jurisdiction "did not reach a latitude so low as to favor the multiplication of the elephant" and added that "steam has been our best and most efficient mode of transportation."

Thailand's good-will toward the West may prove to be of unusual importance. It is one of the hot spots of the East with China on the north and Indo-China on the east and south. It is a breadbasket that will be tempting to hungry Communists.

In the morning I will leave here to fly to Rangoon, Burma, and thence to India.

Vaccum Powers Bagpipes

PALMERSTON, Ont. (AP)—When Ivan Birk plays the bagpipes, a vaccum cleaner provides the windpower.

The 36-year-old bulldozer operator got the idea after he used the cleaner to blow his player piano.

He recently was invited to join a pipe band.

"I soon discovered that it was too much for me to read the music and wiggle my fingers and keep the thing blown up—all at the same time. So I hitched up the vacuume cleaner.

Miss Bettye Ellsworth, Bobby Ryan Married in Double Ring Ceremony

Palms, tall vases of white gladioli and chrysanthemums and two seven branch candelabra holding burning white candles formed the altar setting for the marriage of Miss Bettye Yvonne Ellsworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emery L. Ellsworth, to S-Sgt. Bobby DeLane Ryan, son of Mrs. Georgia F. Ryan, 1003 South Osage and Lt. Col., Thomas W. Ryan, U. S. Air Force, which took place at 2:30 o'clock the afternoon of Sunday, August 17. The double ring service was solemnized at the First Baptist Church by the pastor, the Rev. Thomas W. Croxton.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Mae Moser at the organ played "The Indian Love Call", and "Make Believe", and as Mrs. Joe Van Horn in yellow organdy and Mrs. Harvey L. May in pink nylon lighted the candles she played "At Dawning." The candlelighters wore headbands of yellow and pink daisy chrysanthemums, and the same kind of flowers were attached to the lighted candles they carried.

Mrs. Moser accompanied Miss Esther Meisenheimer, soprano, who sang, "Through the Years", "I Love Thee" and at the close of the ceremony, "The Lord's Prayer." As the processional she used the Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin" and for the recessional Mendelssohn's "Wedding March."

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her ballerina length dress was fashioned of white Chantilly-type all over lace. The tight fitting bodice had a waist length jacket which buttoned to the neck with a tiny turned-back collar and long tight sleeves which were deeply cuffed at the wrist. Her full bouffant skirt was accented with the use of crinolines. She wore a matching lace baby cap, edged with pearls, which held a shoulder length illusion of nylon tulle. She carried a prayerbook with a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and tuberoses. Her jewelry was a matching necklace and earrings of crystal, a gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Rosalie Kirkpatrick as bridesmaid wore a dress of nymph green nylon tulle, ballerina length. The nylon tulle ruching ruffle bordered the tight fitting bodice and extended down the side of the very full draped skirt holding a pleated panel of nylon tulle in place. Her headdress was a halo of pale green roses which held a tiny face veil of matching tulle. She carried a colonial bouquet of daisy chrysanthemums in orchid shade.

Mr. Fred R. Keane of Norfolk, Va., served the bridegroom as best man.

Ushers were Mr. Chris Moore and Mr. Raymond Wilson.

For her daughter's wedding the bride's mother chose a dress of black and beige crepe with which she wore beige accessories, and the bridegroom's mother was attired in navy crepe. Both wore corsages of white gladioli.

A small reception was held immediately following the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. Guests were members of the family and close friends. Arrangements of flowers were used on the buffet and throughout the home.

The dining table, covered with a lace cloth, was centered with a three tier wedding cake encircled with greenery. On either side of the cake were lighted white tapers in crystal candelabra.

The couple left for a trip to Southern Missouri and Oklahoma. For traveling the bride wore a yellow suit with accessories of black and her corsage was a purple orchid.

Sgt. Ryan is stationed at Chanute Air Force Base and the couple will reside in Decatur, Ill.

The bride attended Central Missouri State College, Warrensburg where she was a member of the Alpha Sigma Alpha Social Sorority, and the Alpha Phi Sigma Honorary Society. She is also a member of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, the Community Playhouse, and is president of the Smith-Cotton "S" Club. She was employed until her marriage at the Prudential Insurance Co.

Matthews, Archer City, Tex., before an arch garlanded with satiny jade foliage and gladioli and flanked on each side with baskets of pink gladioli. The chancel setting was illuminated by burning pink tapers in several seven branch candelabra trimmed with jade and pink satin bows.

The Rev. D. Warren Neal, pastor of Broadway Presbyterian Church in Sedalia, performed the ceremony at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, August 24, at the First Methodist Church in Knob Noster.

Preceding the ceremony a program of piano music was furnished by Miss Wilma Lyle, Knob Noster, and Miss Dorothy Lynde, Windsor. A-2c William D. Covey, stationed at Anchorage, Alaska, who was unable to be present for his sister's wedding, recorded the following songs "Through the Years", "Ave Maria" and "The Lord's Prayer", which were played. The processional and recessional were organ recordings.

The candles were lighted by Miss Kay Baker and Miss Donna Saults, cousin of the bride, who wore formals of pink net over matching taffeta. They carried pink tapers to which were attached pink pompon aster corsages.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, chose for her wedding a gown of white satin with lace applique. The fitted basque bodice was of white lace appliqued on white satin and featured a drop shoulder yoke. It was closed down the back with tiny lace covered buttons. The long lace sleeves tapered to points over the wrists. The full skirt worn over a hoop borrowed from Mrs. W. R. Baker, lengthened into an aisle wide train was accented with Chantilly lace which fell into a circular pattern over the skirt. Her veil of double illusion cascaded from a heart shaped bonnet of white satin trimmed with seed pearls and irridescent sequins. She carried a garland arm bouquet of white starlite roses and stephanotis and varigated ivy foliage and clusters of lace with bridal ribbon streamers. She wore a double strand of pearls as her only ornament.

Mrs. R. L. Snell, Denver, Colo., as matron of honor, wore a gown of peacock blue nylon tulle over satin. The fitted bodice featured three quarter length sleeves. The pleated skirt was ballerina length and a satin sash was at the waist. She wore a half hat fashioned of matching satin and nylon tulle.

Mrs. Clyde McMasters, Sapulpa, Okla., Mrs. Kenneth Mann, Kansas City, and Miss Mary Ann Edwards, Ft. Sumner, N. M., were bridesmaids. They were attired in strapless ballerina length gowns of aqua nylon tulle over satin with matching stoles. They wore aqua nylon tulle heartshaped picture hats. The attendants carried semi-crescent bouquets of blush pink asters with the honor attendant's bouquet being a shade darker.

Donna Lee Mann, Kansas City, and Linda Merle Matthews, niece of the bridegroom, Knob Noster, flower girls, were dressed in floor length dresses of pink net over taffeta trimmed with rosebuds. They carried dainty pink flower baskets of pink pompon asters and ivy.

The ringbearer, Courtney Lee Saults, cousin of the bride, Jefferson City, wearing a pink taffeta frock carried a nosegay cluster of pink pompon asters with a satin ribbon holding the rings for the double ring ceremony.

Phil Matthews, Knob Noster, and Tommy Bishop, Killeen, Tex., both nephews of the bridegroom, were train bearers. They wore short white suits with black bow ties.

Mr. Matthews chose Mr. Bob Mapes, Dimmitt, Tex., as his best man. Groomsmen were Mr. Clyde McMasters, Sapulpa, Okla., Mr. Ken Mann, Kansas City, and Mr. R. L. Snell, Denver, Colo. Mr. L. C. For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Covey chose to wear a dress of aqua lace and linen. Her accessories were navy blue. Mrs. Matthews, mother of the bridegroom, was attired in a light blue lace and crepe dress with black accessories. Both mothers had corsages of pink delight roses.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held for 300 guests at the home of the bride's parents. The home was decorated with garden flowers. A five tiered heartshaped wedding cake centered the lace covered table. The cake was surrounded by pink and white asters and pink tapers.

Your Wardrobe

Color can be right for you to improve your appearance and also right to improve your mood. So many colors are being shown for fall, there is no reason not to have the right one. Study your complexion, hair and eyes and decide what colors are best for you. Try these colors on and see which ones do the most for you and which ones you like the best. If you don't know your best colors seek the aid of someone who really knows rather than taking a friend's advice. After you have found the right color for your dresses, coats, and suits decide on accessories that make the most of your basic colors. You can put on a drab dress or suit and by wisely selecting accessories make a smart outfit. Sometimes it takes only a scarf or gay blouse to lift your mood and give you the confidence of being "smartly dressed."

Garden Guide

Now Is Best Time To Seed Your Lawn

Mrs. Browne Edelen
Sedalia Garden Club No. 3

The best time for seeding your lawn is the period between August 15th and October 1st, depending on the weather. Nature cooperates to provide better growing conditions for young grass plants at this season. This makes it especially advantageous for new lawns or others needing extensive seeding. Fall seeding is especially desirable if bluegrass is to be sown. It is well to get an early start in the preparation and renovation of the soil even though the weather is still hot. Get the soil ready so that when the fall rains come and the nights are cooler you can take advantage of these favorable conditions. Begin by ridding the lawn of all water grass and weeds by digging or pulling them out. This loosens the top soil and helps prepare it for the next step which is the application of a good lawn food. A good well balanced commercial fertilizer is best at this time because of its immediate availability and the ease of application. Use about 2 pounds to the 100 square feet and rake in well. Next sow the seed, paying special attention to the thin or bare spots, and finish by adding a top dressing of good soil about one-fourth inch thick. Sprinkle lightly but frequently during dry weather as the surface should be kept constantly moist until the grass is well rooted.

After the first hard freeze an application of well rotted manure is advisable. This will stimulate a heavy growth for early spring which will help to crowd out any water grass that is sure to be in there fighting for room next summer. And now for a word about your new lawn's 'enemies'.

Enemy number one is your lawn mower. Do not cut new grass too short. About 2 or even 2½ inches above the ground will leave enough growth to help protect the roots during the hot dry months. Bluegrass is normally dormant during the period in summer when the temperature remains above 90 degrees day after day.

Enemy number two is the grass-catcher on your mower.

Your grass needs the protection of a mulch. An application of fine peat is beneficial but a least the grass is entitled to its own cuttings. It grew them — If the grass is cut high and often during the spring growing season the fine cuttings will sift through making natures' own mulch and leaving no unsightly rows of 'hay' after each cutting.

Enemy number three is water in light doses. If you must water the lawn give it a thorough soaking occasionally rather than frequent light sprinklings. Unless the weather is extremely hot and dry for a long period bluegrass will fare better by remaining more or less dormant and light sprinklings will only encourage water grass which will in turn crowd and starve the bluegrass.

And now, Good Luck to You.

If carbon monoxide is present in the air in proportions of one to 1,000 parts human beings will be poisoned.

Smith-Cotton High School football practice began last week with 48 recruits out and by Saturday sixty uniforms and equipment for that many boys were assigned by Coach Ralph "Stub" Dow. Only one letterman is back, Earl Nold, first string center of the 1951 squad.

Get Conditioned

The past week was spent in conditioning of the boys, getting the "summer fat" worked off and the boys in physical condition to start into hard grid training this coming week. Football practice starts at 9:30 Monday morning—there is no holiday for football players—and will continue on through the day.

Coach Dow isn't too elated over the material that has reported—but that is the usual procedure with Dow at the beginning of the season—as the boys out are rather green at the present time to football. However, he admits he has a bunch of prospective football players out for practice who at the present time are showing a willingness to learn.

For a number of years he has "green material" and the coaches have had considerable work getting the boys into condition and football knowledge into their heads. But before the season gets too far along the Tigers will probably be turning in some victories for Smith-Cotton.

Bob Edmundson Assists

Coach Bob Edmundson, the past week has been assisting Coach Dow with the conditioning of the team. Monday Coach Dow will have Coach Howard Glavin back and with his two assistants in the harness expects building the Tiger varsity into a winning team.

The season opens just a week from this coming Friday when the Tigers meet their oldest foe, the Marshall High School Owls on the Missouri Valley College gridiron. For years Sedalia and Marshall have started their seasons playing each other. Marshall is in about the same shape as Sedalia as far as material is concerned and a good game is anticipated.

The Central Missouri Conference opens for the Tigers when they meet the Kemper Military Academy of Boonville on the Liberty Park gridiron, that being Friday September 19.

Cardinals End Losing Streak

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 30 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals snapped their six-game losing streak by unleashing their heavy artillery tonight to cop a 12-2 win from the last place Pittsburg Pirates. Eight of the Cards' 15 hits off rookies Ron Necciai and Jim Waugh were extra base blows, six doubles, and homers by Hal Rice and Dick Sisler. Gerry Staley scattered five Pirate hits to cop his 15th win against 12 losses.

Necciai was charged with the defeat, his third against one victory.

The Cards sewed up the contest with a five-run blast in the third inning when they connected for four consecutive doubles, tying a National League record held by many clubs. Necciai gave Solly Hemus the first of four consecutive walks the Card shortstop received, then gave up doubles to Peanuts Lowery and Red Schoendienst, Waugh replaced Necciai at this point, promptly giving up doubles to Stan Musial and Enos Slaughter. H. Rice flied out to Gus Bell in center and Bell's relay to Sonny Senerchia at third got Slaughter for a double play. Sisler then grounded out to end the inning.

In the fifth Rice got the second of his three hits, a two-run homer. Sisler smashed his homer in the ninth, accounting for three of the four needless tallies the Cards registered in this stanza.

The Pirates collected single runs in the fourth and fifth.

Miners Hang 19-1 Defeat On Chiefs

The Sedalia Chiefs bowed to the Moberly Miners, Friday night, 19-1, as the Miners won the fourth game of the play-off series to win the Central Missouri Ban Johnson championship. The Chiefs had won the first half season play and the Miners the second, resulting in the playoff for the title.

The two best games of the four were played in Sedalia in spite of the fact the Chiefs dropped both. The Tuesday night contest was a 2-0 victory for Moberly, Wednesday night at Moberly the Chiefs took the second with a 16-12 victory, then Thursday night the Miners out-smarted the Chiefs to win, 8-6, and Friday night ended the series.

Moberly had the game tied up with a big blue ribbon from the first inning, scoring three runs. They added another in the fourth, while the Chiefs scored their only tally in the top of the fifth. The bottom of the fifth was another runaway as six Miners scored. Seven more runs were added in the seventh and two in the eighth.

Norman Iverson of Moberly, who has had the Chiefs number all season, was on the mound while the entire Chief pitching staff was put into action—Barnes started, relieved by Brown in the first, Falls took over in the fifth, and Arnold in the eighth to finish the contest.

Although the Chiefs were held to one run they did get 19 hits off of Iverson; while the Miners collected 19 off of Sedalia's quartet of hurlers.

Jayhawk Squad Pleases Sikes With Condition

LAWRENCE, Kan., Aug. 30 (AP)—Coach J. V. Sikes said he was happy today over the good condition of his University of Kansas football squad.

He said most of the 69 players who reported for the season's first workout today were physically fit for a full tilt immediately. Thirty-one of the men are lettermen.

Sikes gave the squad an hour-long dummy scrimmage, then dismissed about 30 of the top hands and let the rest knock heads in a real scrimmage.

The Jayhawks will begin twice-a-day workouts Monday. Their 10-game schedule opens with Texas Christian here Sept. 20.

Bobby Slater Wins Iowa Fair Feature

DES MOINES, Aug. 30 (AP)—Bobby Slater, 27-year-old former midget car driver from Kansas City, won the 25-lap auto racing feature before 20,500 persons at the Iowa State Fair today.

Slater whirled around the half-mile dirt track in 11:14.21.

Jimmy Campbell, Bates City, Mo., and Slater made a two-car race of it all the way. Such big name dirt track race drivers as Bill Holland, Reading, Pa., and Bobby Grim, Indianapolis, were left far behind.

Holland was a good 200 yards back of the two leaders when Slater's Offenshauser crossed the finish line approximately two car lenghts ahead of Campbell.

Grim finished fourth, followed by Don Branson, Lexington, Ill.; Red Hoyle, Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Jim Wegesheider, St. Louis, and Mac McHenry, Wichita, Kan.

Indiana Coaches End Bass Drum Beating

MUNCIE, Ind., Aug. 30 (AP)—There may be some doubt about the kind of a noise that annoys an oyster but there's agreement on one clamor that crucifies a coach.

It's the booming of bass drums at Ball State and Wabash home basketball games—and it's going to stop.

After a discussion of the unnerving racket by the Indiana Intercollegiate Coaches Association, Athletic Director Paul B. Williams of Ball State said he would see that there's no more drumming in Ball gymnasium.

Garland Frazier, Wabash athletic director, said he thought his school also will put an end to its drum beating.

The original idea was to hit the drums a lick each time the home team scored. But the drummers got out of hand and made like Gene Krupa.

Fishermen's Car Dunked

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A father and son who went fishing recently ended up by fishing their car out of Clearwater Lake at Piedmont, Mo.

The empty car rolled into the lake when the brakes gave way. And it came in handy that Dan J. Howard's son, Harold, is a U.S. Coast Guardsman. With the combination of a chain, a tow-truck and a motorboat, they finally dragged the car out.

Rain Helps Athletics

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 30 (AP)—A heavy rainstorm tonight washed out a single game between the Boston Red Sox and the Philadelphia Athletics in the bottom half of the fourth inning with the Red Sox ahead 6-0. The umpires waited for 80 minutes before calling the game.

Sports Scraps

(By D. KELLY SCRUTON)

BAN JOHNSON baseball is dead. It died Friday night at Moberly, Mo., after the Chiefs bowed out to the Miners 19 to 1 in the final game of the playoff series for the championship. "That's all" was the feeling of the sponsor Cal Rodgers and members of the team.

The Sedalia Chiefs were born in Sedalia in 1948 when Cal Rodgers took over the sponsorship with the thought of building a great Ban Johnson organization in Sedalia. That year the Chiefs blossomed into Champions of the league in one year.

It was a big year, that season of 1948, but the expected came in 1949 when several of the Chiefs graduated from the team because of age limit and it slipped to third place in the league. But 1950 saw the youngsters of '49 grow into champions and the title came back to Sedalia that year. Then in 1951 attendance began to slip and the team likewise slipped, but not too far, second place in the league to be exact.

Although attendance fell off, the sponsors felt that 1952 would be a different year—felt it would be better—but it ran true to form in being different, the attendance fell off so great that the team began to fall with it at the end.

It is an expensive activity, but a worthy one. If it is not worthy activity for the young men, then there is no use to continue with it. Evidently the people have spoken by their support, and it seems Ban Johnson has died a natural death. The attendance has been so small that not enough was taken in to meet expenses, one gate for example was as low as $13.00 while during the playoff series which should have been attractive, no gate in Sedalia reached more than $75, in fact the second was hardly $60. Over at Moberly, the desire to keep the game going was proven by attendance of crowds of 600 people at the first game and nearly 900 last Friday night—that's support.

One thing for sure Ban Johnson did serve will during its five years lifetime. It made possible for several boys to sign Major League contracts, and possibly had it not been for the Sedalia Chiefs Jerry Lumpe of Warsaw would never had been heard of, and today he is enroute to big time baseball—because while playing here he was discovered by the big time scouts.

We might say some of these lads who signed contracts are the survivors of the Chiefs and I might name a few: Buddy Thomas, Salty Shoemaker, Carl Barbour, Don McMillin, Jerry Lumpe, Bobby Shawver, Ralph Walker, Bob Ray, Jerry Tuggle, Ralph Falls, and others.

There may be a spark of life, but it's going to take a lot to fan it back to a big flame next year. It is going to take a lot of encouragement by baseball followers to get Cal Rodgers to take on the endeavor again, it might be possible to save the Chiefs from the grave—but there is a big doubt in my mind.

SOME may say, Oh Well, so the Chiefs have died. It is more serious than that, because it is one of the outlets for the ball players of the Little League—it is one of their futures after leaving the Little League to go into the Junior American Legion baseball, then into Ban Johnson baseball.

The Little League got off to a great start this year, next year it will be twice as successful and begin to building twice as many good baseball players. Where will they go when they reach 10 years old, the American Legion of course, but from there—where too, it would have to be Ban Johnson,if that class of baseball is here.

It takes money to carry on Ban Johnson—to play a game at home the cost is at least $75 for a game, then travel expense, uniforms, equipment and so on. It takes considerable money and with crowds of less than twenty to thirty people in the stands makes it rather bad for the sponsor, much less the players.

Small crowds in a stand gives the players the feeling that nobody is behind them, nobody cares. Regardless of how much a boy likes a sport and how much he wants to play, when they are in competition they like to see a crowd cheering for them. Empty seats give them that empty feeling and an attitude of "Oh well what's the use."

Something should be done to help save Ban Johnson, help give a lift to Junior Legion, and more ever to help continue and boost Little League. If enough people could help finance it or some financial way could be arranged to keep all going and have a free gate and let everybody attend, it might be the salvation.

If anyone has an answer to the problem let us know what it is maybe it could be passed on to those who would like to see baseball revived in Sedalia again. One thing certain, you can publicize games, you can boost them in the news columns of the newspapers, but you can't drive customers through the gates and make them go.

A sports minded citizen has asked me to try and locate someone who might have seen, heard about or read of a 40-mile race held on the old race track at the old Sisher Park, now Liberty Park where two women rode side saddle for twenty miles. It was back in 1880, to 1883, the exact year not recalled.

It seems this individual is under the impression a young lady by the name of Nellie Archer was the winner. The two ladies rode their mounts around and around and changed horses every so often. They had to be lifted from their mounts and placed on the relief horses and continue.

Anyone recalling the incident is requested to drop us a line. It was pointed out the race was run before the old Kite track which is now becoming a part of a new housing development, the track part known as Bunker Hill.

Al Lopez Also Warned

Bobby Shantz Receives Note Threatening Personal Harm

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 30 (AP)—Two more top baseball figures have received anonymus letters, some of them containing threats of personal harm, it was disclosed today.

The reports followed by less than a week two threatening letters sent to Ralph Kiner, Pittsburgh outfielder. One demanded $6,200 upon threat of his life.

Bobby Shantz, star Philadelphia Athletics pitcher, yesterday disclosed he has received three letters warning him not to appear on the field when the A's play in Boston next week-end.

Cleveland baseball announcer Jimmy Dudley said today he and Al Lopez, manager of the Cleveland Indians, received some strange letters. He said one of them arrived with a signature and address, but he did not disclose them.

Note Typewritten

Shantz, leading hurler in the American League with 22 wins and four defeats, said the letters he received were postmarked Cambridge, Mass. He said he threw two away but kept the third. The typewritten note addressed "To My Dear Friend Mr. Shantz," and signed, "A Guy," said:

"Right here and now I want this to sink into your little head, when you return here in Boston you better not appear on the field called Fenway Park.

"If you do I'll be meeting you after that game. Also if you mention this to the cops or anyone from the Athletics, I'll do more to your baseball life than you can expect. Remember, little boy."

FBI Starts Inquiry

FBI agents in Philadelphia said they have begun an inquiry to determine whether federal laws have been violated.

Shantz said he is willing and eager to hurl in Boston, but he is scheduled to take the mound in Philadelphia against the Red Sox tomorrow and the New York Yankees Thursday.

"After all," cracked Bobby—who stands 5-feet-6 and weighs 139 pounds — "I don't make much of a target out there on the mound."

College Grid Season Nears With Old Problems Remaining

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK, Aug. 30 (AP)—The practice whistle blows Monday for most of the nation's college football teams, signalling a new season with the same batch of old problems.

Despite echoes of the reform movement pressed last winter by a group of college presidents, Saturday afternoon enthusiasts will find their sport essentially the same.

Here, in digest, is the picture for the traditional Sept. 1 opening of the fall gridiron maneuvers:

1. There will be little or none of the deemphasis recommended by the purity-bent educators as an aftermath of the gambling and cribbing scandals.

2. The two-platoon system is still alive. Bowl games will be played as usual. The top players are still receiving scholarships.

3. A restricted television program, similar to that in 1951 but more liberalized, will be in effect. There will be no TV blackouts. Fans will get to see a game on each of 12 Saturdays.

4. Fifth-three college teams will be under new head coaches, marking one of the biggest turnovers in teaching talent in years.

5. Two-platoon and TV pressure continue to favor the big, rich institutions at the expense of the small. San Francisco, Loyola of Los Angeles and St. Bonaventure dropped out of the picture, making a total of 36 forced to quit football since the 1950 season.

If there's a "new look" to the sport it will involve formations, with a decided trend toward the split-T and kindred spread attacks.

When Jim Tatum's Maryland Terrapins, using the split-T, slaughtered Tennessee's national champions, the single wing precisionists, in the Sugar Bowl, 28-13, the new formation found itself with many new converts.

Maryland, with Jack Scarbath back at the quarterback spot, is the pre-season favorite for national honors.

Also highly rated are Michigan State, a "T" team using unbalanced line; Illinois, Oklahoma and Georgia Tech, who employ variations of the "T."

The main difference between the split T, originated by Missouri's Don Faurot and also popularized by Oklahoma's Bud Wilkinson, is that the linemen are spread out—or split—giving the offense holes to shoot the backs through. the quarterback stands close to the center and hands off at the line of scrimmage.

Maryland proved in its successful season las. year that a team with a clever quarterback and hard-running backs can generate tremendous land power and control the ball.

The Terrapins will not have their line - smashing fullback, Ed (Big Mo) Modzelewski, but will have the second half of the touchdown tandem, Ed Fullerton.

Maryland and Clemson were suspended by the Southern Conference for playing in post - season bowl games against the will of the parent body. Black-listed by other members of the conference, they had to arrange "outside" schedules.

Tarheels Turn To T

North Carolina is one of the colleges shifting from a single wing to the split-T. Coach Carl Snavely of the Tarheels hired Washington & Lee's George Barclay to put in the new system.

But the trend is not wholly in the "T" direction. Coach Bear Bryant at Kentucky, losing quarterback Babe Parelli, announced he was quitting the "T" for the double and single wing. Navy is dropping the "T" for the Notre Dame box.

There are still strong single wing specialists left to carry the banner. Of these, Princeton is defending the longest winning streak in major ranks, 23 games, and Tennessee and UCLA are rated contenders for national honors.

Most Football Powers Expect Better Attendance This Year

NEW YORK, Aug. 30 (AP)—A spot check by The Associated Press of ten universities famous for their football teams showed today that the expectations generally are for increased attendance this year.

Advance ticket sales in half the cases are running higher than in 1951. The others are equal or only slightly lower. Most athletic directors don't expect national televising of one big game each Saturday to hurt at the gate.

There are two notable exceptions to the upward trend, and both their stadiums are among the nation's largest. Michigan, which can accomodate 97,239, and Ohio State, whose field holds 79,000, looks for smaller total crowds in 1952.

Georgia Tech, expecting to have one of the nation's best teams, anticipates its best gate receipts ever. Advance ticket sales are 97,338, an increase of 17,035 over last year. Coach Bobby Dodd says "I would not mind letting them televise games which probably would be sell-outs anyway."

Trojans May Draw Less

Here are the reports from the other nine big schools:

Southern California — Advance sale 14,700, up 17 per cent. Seven home games in 1951 drew 365,000, and 320,000 expected this year for same number.

Southern Methodist — Advance ticket sale slightly under 1951. Attendance last year 201,600 for four home games; expect 275,000 for six games in 1952.

Pennsylvania—Expect 30,000 advance sales this year compared to 23,000 last.

Ohio State—Estimate 440,000 for six home games compared to 455,737 for same number last year. Ed Weaver, ticket chief, says televising a remote game wouldn't hurt, but one involving Michigan or Notre Dame might.

Michigan—Advance sale expected to approximate last year's 29,000. Total attendance for six games last year was 445,636, and Athletic Director Fritz Crisler says "I expect attendance to hold pretty well," but adds Michigan might be "slightly off."

OU May Set Record

Oklahoma—Advance sale 14,300 compared to 14,965 for all of 1951 Attendance last year was 198,196 for five games. Ken Ferris, Athletic business manager, says new pre game attendance record possible this year, but there are only four home games.

California—Advance sale 55,000, about same as last year. California drew 306,490 for six games last year, expects 322,000.

North Carolina—Advance sale 83,516, compared to 120,000 at same time last year. Last year five home games drew 183,258.

Pillette Hurls Browns To Win Over Detroit

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 30 (AP)—Duane Pillette pitched a thrilling two-hitter as the St. Louis Browns defeated the Detroit Tigers here tonight, 2 to 1. Clint Courtney, with a double in the fourth inning and another two-bagger in the eighth, drove in both Brownie runs.

Detroit took a first inning lead when Johnny Groth walked, moved up on an infield out and scored on Walt Dropo's single. Their only other hit was a double by Cliff Mapes in the fifth.

The Browns had trouble getting base hits off Art Houtteman, too. Vic Wertz walked and came home on Courtney's double in the fourth, tying the score.

Houtteman had allowed only three hits prior to the eighth and had retired two men in that inning when Gordon Goldsberry singled. Wertz then drew his third walk of the game and Courtney followed with his second double, bringing Goldsberry home.

Civic Club Golf Trophy Won By the Lions

The Sedalia Lions Club golf team came through to win the golf trophy for the second time. The Lions topped the Kiwanis Club golfers 72.7 to 74, while the Rotary was third and Optimist fourth with averages of 76 and 76.5 respectively.

Stanfield Shoots Par

The tournament was figured on averages as to the total scores in accordance with a percentage average. The total scores were then divided by the number of players playing to get the team average. The Lions had seven "hot rocks" Bernard Stanfield, captain, shooting the 18 holes in par while two others Herb Studer and Jack Pasley came in with scores of two-over par both having 74's. Others playing with their handicaps stayed in the low 70's.

The Kiwanis team playing with 12 players this year was only 1.3 points behind the Lions. Kiwanis won the trophy in 1951. The Rotary Club had 14 players, while the Optimist Club had three players and in reality did not qualify for the play as the rules were the clubs must have four or more players.

Injury Forces Aussie To Quit Tennis Tourney

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 30 (AP)—Possibilities of an all-Australian final in the National Tennis championships were smashed today when Australian champion Ken McGregor was forced to default in the third set of his first round match.

McGregor, one of the big favorites for the title, was ranked right behind his countryman, Frank Sedgman. But with the score 6-3, 6-4, 5-6 in his match against Calvin MacCracken of Tenafly, N. J., his ailing stomach troubled him so much he had to throw down his racket.

The injury was described as a strained stomach muscle which, so far, has failed to respond to treatment.

McGregor was in the same half of the draw as Vic Seixas, the No. 1 hope of the U. S. Now that he is out of it, the chances are the semi-final will pit Seixas against Herbie Flam, a young fellow who has the kind of a soft game the Aussies delight in manhandling.

Otherwise, things went along in routine manner with the long process of weeding out the "have nots" among the bulky field of 128 players half completed.

The only seeded player who did not show up to expectations was Art Larsen, the former national champion from San Leandro, Calif., who had his troubles staggering past William Long of New York, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4.

Skee Riegel Leads Insurance City Open

WETHERSFIELD, Conn., Aug. 30 (AP)—Skee Riegel of Tulsa, Okla., matched a spectacular subpar 67 with an earlier 66 for a 133 total to set a sizzling pace at the halfway mark in the 72-hole, $15,000 Insurance City Open golf tournament.

The handsome 180-pound clouter who has yet to win a "big one" in the pro circuit, held a four-stroke lead over his closest challengers and looked like he'll be tough to beat.

Among these challengers is Art Wall of Honesdale, Pa., who at the end of yesterday's opening 18-hole round, was tied with Riegel, National Open champ Julius Boros, the Connecticut native and sentimental favorite, was down the list with 141.

Riegel, swinging his iron clubs with unerring skill, fired five birdies as he carved out a 33-34-67, four under par over the Wethersfield Country Club's testing 6,504 yard course.

Jones, Ben To Attend Celebrities Tourney

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 (AP)—Ben Hogan and Bobby Jones, recently voted the greatest pro and the greatest amateur golfers of all time, will attend the National Celebrities Open championships here Sept. 18-21.

In announcing this today, Bus Ham, sports editor of the Washington Post, said Jones will not play in the tournament. It wasn't certain whether Hogan would play, either.

But both will attend a banquet Sept. 20 in the Statler Hotel at which he 10 greatest pros and 10 greatest amateurs, as chosen by the Professional Golfers Association and press and radio writers, will be honored.

Hogan led the pros with 522 votes, barely beating out Walter Hagen, who had 519. Jones led Chick Evans by 515 votes to 447.

Mantle, Berra Help Reynolds Beat The Nats

NEW YORK, Aug. 30 (AP)—Home runs by Yogi Berra and Mickey Mantle carried the New York Yankees to a 6-4 victory over the Washington Senators today as Allie Reynolds yielded a dozen hits but managed to go the route for his 16th victory.

The decision increased the Yanks lead over Cleveland to a game and a half, pending the outcome of the Tribe's night game in Chicago.

A crowd of 41,558, brought out largely by the pre-game ceremonies in which the all-time Yankee team was honored, saw a tight game until the seventh when Berra clubbed his four bagger off reliefer Joe Haynes with one on.

That opened the gap to 6-2 and provided the difference in the final score when the Nats punctured Reynolds for single tallies in the eighth and ninth innings.

Gumpert Fails To Last

Randy Gumpert, and ex-Yankee, was the starting and losing pitcher. He lasted only four frames, during which time he was smeared for seven hits and four runs, including Mantle's solo homer in the third. The loss was Gumpert's seventh of the year and third to New York.

Jim Busby, whose homer won Friday night's game, continued to slug Yankee pitching. The usually light-hitting outfielder drove out three singles and batted in two runs. He drove in Pete Runnels after the latter hit safely in the second inning, gaining a temporary deadlock at 1-1.

Jensen Robs Collins

The Yanks, who had scored on Mantle's double and Collins' single in the first, broke the tie when Mantle poked his 19th round tripper into the right field seats in the following inning. Collins' bid for a duplicate was frustrated just a moment later when Jack Jensen made a leaping catch against the right field stands.

Successive singles by Gene Woodling, Irv Noren and Gil McDougald, with a scoring fly by Reynolds, added two more in the fourth.

Collins singled before Berra hit the seats in the seventh. He needs only two more to set an all-time record for American League catchers. Bill Dickey, one of the all-time Yankees honored today, hit 29 in 1937.

Mrs. Pung Wins Women's Amateur

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 30 (AP)—Mrs. Jacqueline Pung, a 210-pound Hawaiian housewife who was almost ready to give up golf, became the Women's National Amateur golf champion today.

By sheer determination and self-control, she shook off an early attack of jitters to defeat Shirley McFedters, a 21-year-old college girl from Long Beach, Calif 2 and 1, in the 36-hole final match.

It was a shaky-nerve affair from start to finish, but Shirley's calm confidence deserted her on the crucial outgoing nine of the afternoon round while the older, more placid Mrs. Pung gained control.

Mrs. Pung, one of the longest hitters who have appeared in women's golf, is a former Public Links player. She is 29 years old, mother of two children who are training to become swimmers. She works as a sales clerk in a chain store in Honolulu. Her Chinese husband is a fireman.

Fulvous Sets Record At Washington Park

CHICAGO, Aug. 30 (AP)—Fulvous, a daughter of Dixiana Stable's famous Spy Song, today charged to a half-length victory in the $70,825 Princess Pat stakes at Washington Park, setting a new record for the event.

The winner, guided by Jockey Dave Erb, sprinted the six furlongs in 1:09 4-5, the fastest time in the 15 runnings of the event.

Biddy Jane, an 8 to 1 shot, was second and Mimi Mine third. The crowd of 27,709 wagered $91,618 that Mimi Mine, the 1 to 2 favorite, and ridden by Jockey Eddie Arcaro, would win. Arcaro was shooting for his 33rd stakes victory of the season.

Fulvous, owned by Miss Mary V. Fisher of Detroit, earned $55,825 for her brilliant victory in the richest race for two-year-old fillies. She now has earned $109,100, including $53,275 picked up for a length victory in the Arlington Lassie stakes, counterpart of the Princess Pat.

Fulvous, coupled with Patio Patter as a Dixiana Stable entry, returned $13.60, $5.40 and $2.80. Biddy Jane paid $13.20 and $4.40 and Mimi Mine returned $2.20 for show.

Jaycees Again Sponsor Contest To Choose Queen For The Royal

The Jaycees again are searching for Sedalia's loveliest lovely as a candidate for American Royal Queen.

In cooperation with the Fox Theatre, the Jaycees will put on the contest to select a girl to represent Sedalia. The Sedalia contest will be held around Oct. 2, and out-of-town judges will look the girls over and decide which one will go to Kansas iCty.

In order to enter the contest the girl must be 18 and not over 24. Her beauty, which takes in charm, personality and magnetism, counts 50 per cent. Poise, carriage, good taste and grooming count 30 per cent, and culture and education make up the other 20 per cent.

Here is where the tall girl, who usually worries because she thinks she is too tall, has the advantage.

Somehow, when judges pick queens they pick the tall girls. So this is a challenge to the tall girls. If you are tall, contact Bob Wall at the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce or at the shoe department at Sage's and sign up. If you are short, you might try anyway—you never can tell about judges.

Last year Miss Anna Rose Baker was the candidate from Sedalia and was one of the eight ladies in waiting, which is the highest any Sedalia girl has gone in the American Royal Queen contests.

Another qualification for a queen candidate, she must be single. That means she has never been married—a divorcee or a widow cannot qualify.

The committee in charge of the contest from the Jaycees is composed of Bob Wall, chairman, Ken Fallis and James Van Wagner.

The girl, who becomes "Miss Sedalia" in the contest, and girl who places second will receive a number of gifts, and for the queen candidate the trip to Kansas City will offer a round of excititement. It is a gala affair of luncheons and parties with all expenses paid. The Royal also will choose two royal princesses and eight ladies-in-waiting.

'Dutch' Returns To Pacific Cafe

The Pacific Cafe' is to be operated by Leroy "Dutch" Kirchhofer and W. E. "Ponnie" Poindexter, who took over the business from Herbert J. Olson and George E. Boots, who have operated it for more than a year. Olson and Boots leased the business from Kirchhofer in May, 1951.

At the time Olson and Boots acquired the business, Kirchhofer went to Union where he operated a Cafe' on Highway 50 for about a year.

Having sold his interests at Union, Kirchhofer returned to Sedalia several months ago, and with Poindexter has purchased supplies and other business connections of the cafe' and Pacific bar from Olson and Boots.

Olson, who is affiliated with Boots in the Studebaker agency at the Boots-Olson Motor Co. on West Main, now will take an active part in the motor company. Olson operated the Pacific while Boots operated the motor company the past year.

Kirchhofer and Poindexter have announced the closing of the cafe' for the next week for repairs, redecoration and remodeling. The bar portion of the business, however, will remain open.

The new operators have announced they will specalize in country ham, steak, fried chicken and regular meals. They anticipate in keeping the cafe's portion of the business open 24-hours a day.

Future Looks More Bright For Newhouser

DETROIT, Aug. 30 (AP)—Veteran Hal Newhouser, the lefthanded pitcher of the Detroit Tigers, was worried about his future six months ago. But he isn't today.

Lean, handsome and 31, Hal needs only two more victories to reach the 200th victory mark in the majors. Only 54 of many thousands of pitchers have won 200.

"This season I'll pitch three, maybe four more times," said Hal. "I could make it. Of course, I've got to pitch against Cleveland at least twice and guys like (Early) Wynn and (Bob) Lemon are tough to beat."

Last winter many Detroit fans were wondering if Newhouser would ever pitch again. He threatened to quit if he found out during spring training that he couldn't be a starter.

Hampered by a sore arm, he had a 6-6 record last year.

"I was worried and skeptical this spring about making it," Newhouser grinned, "so I went to Florida three weeks earlier and that was perhaps the biggest factor in getting me in shape.

"By the opening game I felt okay. But the manager (then Red Rolfe) did not choose to use me very often and that was his business.

"Now I'm pitching regularly every six or seven days (under Manager Fred Hutchinson) and my arm feels fine. My motion is as natural as ever."

Newhouser, with a 7-8 mark, has the best record of any Tiger starter.

What's the difference between the Newhouser who blazed his fast ball 29, 25 and 26 victories in the 1944-46 seasons and the new Newhouser?

"Well I've learned how to pace myself. In those days I could pump that fast one through for nine innings. I can't now. Fourteen years tell on your arm.

"Now I throw, for instance, a change of pace a little slider, a curve and then come in with a fast ball."

Bob Feller of the Cleveland Indians and Bob Newsom of the Philadelphia Athletics are the only active pitchers with more than 200 major league victories.

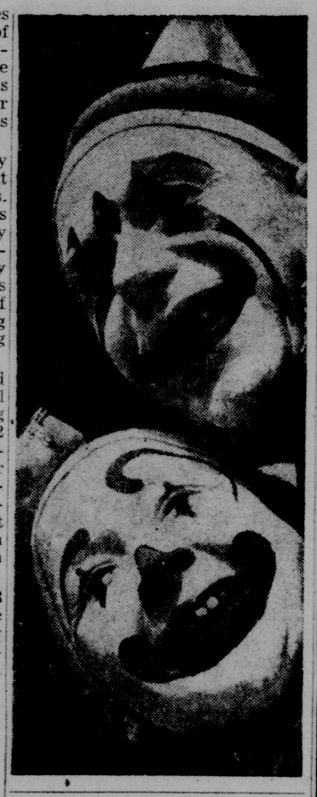
Famous Pantomime Stars With Clyde Beatty Circus



Clowns adept at making smiles out of grins and laughs out of chuckles will bring plenty of merriment to circus goers when the huge Clyde Beatty Railroad Circus comes to Sedalia fairgrounds for afternoon and night performances on Friday, Sept. 5.

Clowns are a vital part of every circus and a mighty important part to all the little boys and girls. This year the Clyde Beatty Circus has over two score of these funny fellows and all of them are prominent in the art of bufoonery. They will present hilarious new skits and walk-a-rounds and many of them have special displays during which they present side-splitting antics.

In addition to the renowned Clyde Beatty, whose sensational wild animal display is still the big lure of the circus, the all new 1952 production is featuring many foreign importations, making their first appearance in America. Combined with the cream of the American champions of the sawdust arena, the show's motto, "Bigger'n Better 'n Ever," is more than an idle boast.

Performances begin at 3 and 8 p.m. with the doors opening one hour earlier so that patrons may have ample time to view the gigantic menagerie at no extra cost.

WD TRACTION BOOSTER
Gives You More Work Power

When you set the hydraulic lever on the WD Tractor, you can add as much as a thousand pounds of weight on the rear tractor wheels.
As the drawbar load increases, the hydraulic system uses the weight of the implement plus the weight of the soil to bear down on the wheels. Location of the implement behind the tractor gives it leverage, which multiples implement weight at the tractor axle.
It's entirely automatic. The tractor selects the amount of weight needed And it's all a part of the complete WD hydraulic system—no extra equipment.
Stop in and let us show you how the WD will do drawbar jobs which ordinarily require a much heavier tractor.

Choice Books On Sports Are At The Public Library

Stories on Baseball Notables, Golf, Football and Tennis — Personal Sketches on Ty Cobb, Stan Musial, DiMaggio and Others

When the first World Series ball is thrown in early in October, it might be the Highlanders for the American League against the Atlantics for the National League?

This may well be the case, for those teams have been leading their respective leagues — but under their modern names, the New York Yankees and the Brooklyn Dodgers. From some twenty volumes at the Public Library devoted to the sport of baseball alone, many things of interest to devotees of that sport may be learned.

"The World Series and Highlights of Baseball," by Buchanan, is one of the newest titles at the Library, and covers pictorially the entire history of the World Series, plus pennant - deciding games and other epic events of America's most popular, most followed sport. Games and plays which forever will be diamond history are graphically illustrated. Ty Cobb exhibits the famous slide that brought terror to enemy basemen. . .Babe Ruth hits his memorable 60th home run. . .Lou Gehrig's big poignant farewells to devoted fans . . . Stan the Man Musial looks over a pitcher. . .Joe DiMaggio slams one out towards the end of his famous hitting streak, while Eddie Stanky defies an umpire.

Story Of Ty Cobb

Another brand-new title is "The Story of Ty Cobb," by Gene Schoor. Ty Cobb's story is typical of American individualism, and on and off the baseball field the story of Ty Cobb is the exciting story of a man who set out to make good and did.

"100 Years of Baseball" by Allen, described as a "must for Mr. and Mrs. Fan" is a book that pulls no punches and that never hesitates to peer into long-shut closets and drag moldy skeletons out into the open. Mr. Allen has undertaken a massive task, but his army of baseball characters breathe life and vitality.

You've often heard of baseball's "Hall of Fame," and a book by that title at the library, written by Ken Smith, describes in colorful detail this Mecca of baseball fans from all over the world.

The managers of famous teams are not neglected on the Library's list, for "The Great Baseball Managers" by Cleveland, brings to the reader behind-the-scenes strategy by these men who helped to plan the exciting drama of the diamond.

Queries Intrigue

Fifty of the most intriguing questions about America's favorite sport are answered in "Do You Know Your baseball?" by Bill Brandt, Mutual Network sports commentator. These are the things the fans recall and debate whenever the subject of baseball comes up.

"Play Ball" by Bert Dunne is a book from which the professional as well as the amateur can derive practical sound instruction in active participation in the game. The "Baseball Tee" which is featured in the book, was created by its author and Joe Cronin of the Boston Red Sox.

The library's list of books on the individual teams includes: "The Chicago Cubs," "The Dodgers," "The New York Yankees," "The Boston Braves," "The Cleveland Indians," "St. Louis Cardinals," "Boston Red Sox," "Detroit Tigers," "Pittsburgh Pirates," and "The Chicago Bears."

Other Favorite Sports

But whether you are an active or an armchair sportsman in any field, there is good reading matter about your favorite sport at the Public Library. The list of sports covered is most comprehensive and most authoritatively written.

Golf is another popular sport that is well represented on the library shelves, the newest book being "Par Golf In Eight Steps," by Joe Novak, who is president of the Professional Golfers Assn. Whether or not the golfer will agree with him, Mr. Novak contends that all clubs, from driver to putter, should be played in fundamentally the same way. Mr. Novak's contribution to golf instruction, he says, has been to discover the simple foundation of good golf — and to work out the eight basic steps for teaching good golf to his pupils.

Take Out Vulgarity

Another book guaranteed to help take the profanity out of your golf is "How to Play Golf" by Ben Thomson, who is golf coach at Yale. If this fails and you are still slicing, try "The Nine Bad Shots of Golf," by a collaboration of three authorities on the game. "Power Golf," by Ben Hogan is no disappointment, as any golf book with Mr. Hogan's name on it is bound to be a thorough job. "Here's How in Golf," written and profusely illustrated by Morie Morrison, has a touch of humor along with its really worth-while information on the game.

The complete coverage of sports by the Public Library is demonstrated by this further list of titles on the subject: Football — "Championship Football," by Dana X. Bible; "Football Facts and Figures," by Dr. L. H. Baker. Tennis — "How to Win at Tennis," by Kramer; "Design for Tennis," by Browne. Basketball — "Holman on Basketball," Miscellanous Sports — "Shallow Water Diving," by Schenck & Kendall; "Fishing is Fun," by Carhart; "Sport Judo," by Yerkow; "Wrestling," by Gallagher and Peery; "Boxing," by Haislet; "Volley Ball," by Laveaga. In addition there are many books of sports stories, one of the newest of which is "Esquire's First Sports Reader."

Rare Portait Is Displayed By State Society

To commemorate the 139th anniversary this month of the death of Benjamin Howard, first governor of Missouri Territory, the State Historical Society at Columbia is exhibiting the only known life portrait ever painted of Howard.

of the Territory of Louisiana by Howard was appointed governor President Madison in 1810, and he continued in office when the name was changed to the Territory of Missouri in 1812. He called the first representative election in Missouri and saw to the organization of Missouri's first five counties. Howard County, the seventh, was named for him in 1816.

When news of the War of 1812 reached St. Louis, Howard set up defense measures against the Indians and in 1813 resigned his governorship to become a brigadier-general in the United States Army. He returned to St. Louis from an expedition to Illinois and died there after an illness on September 18, 1814.
